Meteor Breaks Up

Sky Explodes Into Daylight

TORONTO (CP) — A giant meteor broke up in a spectacular flash over southern Ontario and the northeastern U.S. Saturday night, triggering thousands of telephone calls to police and news media.

Burning fragments were reported to have scattered a huge area and the fireball was so brilliant that sightings were reported from as far apart as Denver, Colo., and St. Eustache, Que.

Residents of at least nine states reported sighting the meteor blazing across the northeastern sky, turning the night to garish day.

TRACKED BY RADAR

An official at the U.S. Coast Guard station in Port Huron, Mich., said the fireball was tracked on a radar screen. He said apparently the meteor broke up and the bulk of it landed in Lake Huron off of Harbor Beach, Mich., about 60 miles north of Sarnia.

As the meteor broke up a shower of sparks cascaded earthwards, and two fires were reported by police in the Sudbury area.

PLANE MISSED

An airplane pilot flying from Peterborough to London, Ont., said a meteorite fell past his plane about a mile north of Woodstock, Ont.

The pilot, Bruce Common of London, said he was flying at 4,000 feet when the fireball flamed out just below his flight path.

PIECES SCATTERED

Ontario Provincial Police reported a piece of the meteor fell to the ground near Huntsville, Ont., about 100 miles east of Toronto.

In Buffalo, N.Y., a flaming object lit up the skies over wide areas of New York State and police had reports that it may have fallen into Lake Erie.

OVER OHIO

However, a spokesman for the U.S. Air Force at Hancock Field in Syracuse, N.Y., said tracking equipment recorded it as continuing to travel past Ohio.

Over northern Ohio, the light of the meteor was so bright, several persons said it turned the evening sky as light as day.

Ex-Lions Big Draw —But Steelers Lose

Despite steady rain and competition from the horse racing, Victoria Steelers drew 2,121 spectators to MacDonald Park for their first home game in the Pacific Football League. Steelers, however, lost 20-0 to powerful Seattle Ramblers. The Victoria club was strengthened by a contingent of nine former B.C. Lions and trailed by only one touchdown until the fourth quarter. See picture, Page 14, and story, Page 15.

Masses of young Chinese, many of them members of Red Guard, crowd Peking street during current demonstrations. Each holds copy of works of Chairman Mao. Red Guard is composed primarily of Chinese boys and girls in late teens or early 20s with worker or peasant background.

Canton Patrolled

Troops to Curb Guards

HONG KONG (AP) — Regular Chinese army troops have moved into Canton to curb a violent group of youthful Red Guards reported to have mistreated the aged and infirm, travellers from Communist China reported Saturday.

Signs from Peking, however, were that the purge of so-called rightists from the Chinese Communist party continued, with indications that new heads might roll from the top echelons. (See story Page 3.)

Travellers from Canton reported that regular army troops started patrolling Canton's streets Wednesday night and early Thursday. Cantonese Red Guards had resisted efforts from Red Guards sent from Peking to hold down violence against persons accused of "bourgeois habits and customs," the travellers said.

They added there had been clashes between the Canton Red Guards and those sent from Peking.

It was reported the army patrols had come from Peking because Canton military leaders had kept hands off the Red Guards.

The Red Guards, compared by some to the Hitler youth in Germany during the Second World War, were formed to protect Chairman Mao Tse-tung and his leadership and to help carry out the "great proletarian cultural revolution" — a purge decreed by the Communist party Central Committee in Peking last month.

Leaders of that revolution ordered Saturday that the full force of the purge be brought to bear on "the handful of bourgeois rightists who have sneaked into the Communist party and are still clinging to power."

Purge Continues

Soviet Signs Target Of Chinese

MOSCOW (UPI) — Communist Chinese Red Guards have launched an anti-Soviet rampage in Shanghai, Pravda reported today.

The report said the guards have pulled down Soviet emblems and organized anti-Russian demonstrations.

Pravda made no mention of reports by travellers reaching Hong Kong that Russians had been beaten up in Shanghai.

SMITH NEAR FINAL BREAK?

SALISBURY (Reuters)

—Opinion hardened here Saturday that Prime Minister Ian Smith will declare Rhodesia a republic on or about Nov. 11, the first anniversary of his white-minority regime's seizure of independence from Britain.

A statement to parliament by Smith several months ago that the government was not considering any move toward republic status has not allayed persistent rumors that this is just around the corner.

Saturday's Rhodesia's Herald, the only daily newspaper in this Rhodesian capital, asks in an editorial: "Can the conclusion be escaped that the logical end of the first part of the road Rhodesia is now treading is a formal declaration of status as an independent republic outside the Commonwealth?"

NOT CENSORED

The fact that this editorial was not censored led some observers here to believe that the government now might be moving toward such a declaration and that the publication of the editorial might help pave the way toward public acceptance of it.

LONDON (AP) — British Prime Minister Wilson announced Saturday night he is sending two top men to Rhodesia. They are expected to seek some way of bringing that rebellious white-ruled colony to acceptance of eventual Negro-majority rule.

FLY TONIGHT

An announcement from Wilson's 10 Downing Street office said Herbert Bowden, new secretary for Commonwealth affairs, and Sir Elwyn Jones, attorney-general, will fly to Salisbury tonight.

The announcement added they will "visit Rhodesia for purposes indicated in the communiqué on Rhodesia issued by the Commonwealth prime ministers' meeting."

ALL SECTIONS

That communiqué stipulated that "all sections" of Rhodesian opinion — 4,000,000 Negroes against 200,000 whites — should be consulted on majority-rule agreement.

Prime Minister Smith seized independence for Rhodesia from Britain Nov. 11 last and ever since has scorned pressure — diplomatic and economic — to

George Tagged As Baggage

WOOLEY, England (UPI) —

Judith Sharp, 12, and her grandfather boarded the bus and paid their fares, eight cents each. Because Judith had George with her, she had to pay an additional seven cents.

George is a mouse. "What's in that basket?" the bus conductor asked Judith.

"My mouse," she replied. "That'll be seven cents more, please," the conductor said, explaining that anything alive which rides the bus must pay the fare.

"Ridiculous," a bus company spokesman said of the mouse fare Saturday. He said George should have been classified as luggage. He said the rule concerning animals would apply to a dog or a large uncrated animal — but not to a mouse in a four-inch-square basket.

The spokesman said Judith — who takes George everywhere she goes — will get her seven cents back. George had no comment. Not even a squeak.

One Twin Dies Following Separation

TORONTO (CP) — Sherry Ann McGee, one of two Siamese twins successfully separated in a lengthy operation Saturday afternoon, died at the Hospital for Sick Children Saturday night. The second girl, Chrystal Ann, was in critical condition but progressing satisfactorily.

The hospital announcement was made only hours after one of the most skillful surgical teams ever assembled in Canada separated the twins in a six-hour and 25-minute operation. It had been a medical first in Canada.

Doctors reported later that Sherry Ann died of heart failure. An abnormal heart position in the two tiny bodies had almost ended the twins' chances during the operation.

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard McGee of Guelph, Ont., where the twins were born June 2, stayed at the hospital Saturday night following the operation. The McGees have one other child.

STILL PROTRUDING

Chrystal Ann's heart, which had protruded into the chest of her twin, was separated and put back in her chest and the incision closed.

Sherry Ann's heart was still protruding after the operation and doctors feared an attempt to put it back might have fatal results.

Thirteen Whites Arrested For Attacking Negroes

GRENADA, Miss. (AP) — The FBI Saturday arrested 13 white men accused of conspiring in attacks on Negro children at newly desegregated schools. They were taken to Oxford, 45 miles north of here for arraignment before a U.S. commission.

or were released on $1,000 bond each. U.S. Attorney H. M. Ray said the men were charged with conspiracy to violate the civil rights of the Negroes, who were attacked Monday when desegregated schools opened in Grenada.

ACTION ILLEGAL

The law makes it illegal to "injure, oppress, threaten or intimidate any citizen in the free exercise or enjoyment of any right or privilege secured to him by the Constitution or laws of the United States."

Maximum punishment would be 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

In Jackson, Roy K. Moore, head of the Mississippi office of the FBI, said the 13th man was identified as a justice of the peace, James Richard Ayers.

One of the 13 arrested, Wilburn Ray Carroll, 24, is the son of Constable Grady Carroll who has been sentenced to four months in prison for contempt of court.

The FBI arrests came the day after a federal judge at Oxford made permanent his injunction ordering Grenada officials to protect Negro children from "savage attacks" by white men.

Judge Claude Clayton's decision came after two days of testimony by witnesses who said Grenada police took no action while white men beat the Negro youngsters with axe handles and chains.

De Gaulle Plans Election Call

PARIS (UPI) — President de Gaulle will call next month for new French general elections to be held in March, political sources said Saturday.

The sources said de Gaulle will set the voting date for next March when the mandate of the present National Assembly (Lower House), elected in 1962, runs out. He was not expected to call for an early election.

De Gaulle is expected to announce the exact date of the elections at a news conference about Oct. 15, the sources said.

Informants said de Gaulle will drop his aloofness toward party politics and issue an appeal at the news conference for a massive return of the outgoing majority.

Bone-tired and spattered with mud—but still happy — apprentice jockey Maurice Milne starts to relax aboard Devonshire Cream after they won featured Colonist Handicap at Sandown Park Saturday after-

Teachers Plan Strike

RICHMOND, Calif. (UPI) — An AFL-CIO unit went ahead Saturday with plans to stage California's first teachers' strike Monday.

The strike would be against the Richmond school district, which has 44,000 students and 61 elementary and junior and senior high schools.

MORE PICKETS

The teachers plan to throw up additional picket lines around schools which already have been picketed for a week in a strike of non-teaching employees.

Only about 140 of the district's 1,600 teachers observed the picket lines, and classes were well-attended.

But the new strike would probably keep more away. The American Federation of Teachers AFL-CIO, Local 866, has 300 members, and is being encouraged by the mayor, Milton Spinner, a teacher himself.

Wage Dispute

CBC Telecasts Face Strike

TORONTO (CP) — Camera-men and other technicians may vote early next week to strike against the CBC and disrupt television broadcasting.

Spokesmen for the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians said Friday night their 1,785 members likely would reject the majority wage recommendation of a conciliation board.

The walkout could hit CBC production centres across the country as early as next Friday — seven days after release of the report.

BOARD PROPOSAL
The board proposed three wage increases of 7½ per cent with the first retroactive to Jan. 1 and the last coming Oct. 1, 1967. The union nominee to the board filed a separate report urging a three-part wage increase totalling 28½ per cent over two years.

A CBC spokesman said the corporation had accepted the board's proposal.

FOUR TO GO
The corporation is negotiating with four other unions: the Canadian Wire Service, Guild, representing newsmen; International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, Association of Radio and Television Employees of Canada, representing announcers and clerical workers; and the Association of Canadian Television and Radio Artists.

All four unions say they will not cross NABET picket lines if a strike is called.

Council Business

Oak Bay council meets at 8 p.m. Monday to consider eight pieces of correspondence, appoint members to the new court of revision, consider bylaws and hear memos from municipal officials.

There are no meetings in Saanich, Esquimalt, Central Saanich, North Saanich or Sidney.

Meteor Triggers Calls

Burning fragments fell in a farm field near the tiny town of Sweetser, Ind., where witnesses said they burned several minutes before flickering out.

WIDE SIGHTINGS
The flaming fall was also seen from Coldwater, Mich., to St. Louis, Mo., and as far east as Buffalo, N.Y.

A Federal Aviation Agency supervisor at Earl Field near Fort Wayne, Ind., said the dying meteor painted a red glow across the sky and fell with a trailing tail of flames.

'BIG AS A HOUSE'
One report said the fragments "were big as a house."

In Caro, Mich., a deputy sheriff said, "We've had reports from all over the area about small fires on the ground, explosions on the ground and over the lake and pieces and lights raining down."

"We've sent cars out and they've found a lot of small fires, but nothing serious."

'EARLY SUN'
An FAA official at Kalamazoo, Mich., Bob Boylan, said the phenomenon "lit up the entire northeast sky like the early morning sun."

Padded Dashboard Little Help At High Speed

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — Padded instrument panels in autos "won't make much difference" in a high-speed crash, a University of Michigan scientist said in a study released Saturday.

Dr. Donald F. Huelke, associate professor of anatomy said, however, that the padding of the instrument panel apparently has a bearing on nonfatal accidents.

"Most design features appear to be irrelevant into auto fatalities," Huelke said. "In a high-speed collision it won't make much difference if you hit a padded instrument panel or an unpadded one."

CUT SEVERITY
Huelke, part of a scientist team operating the new Highway Safety Research Institute at Michigan, added, "but design apparently does have a bearing on nonfatal injuries. We're trying now to discover which possible changes would do the most to eliminate or reduce the severity of nonfatal injuries."

The professor just completed a four-year study of the causes of death in automobile accidents and now is concentrating on the problem of auto injuries and their relation to cars' interior design.

From a study of some 300 victims in 225 accidents over two years, Huelke concluded, "Many painful and disabling, and costly injuries could be prevented if people would just take a little precaution on their own part and wear seat belts."

DIAGONAL BETTER
He said the seat belts would have saved 40 per cent of the 177 victims in cases they investigated. A diagonal shoulder belt, he said, would have saved an additional 13 per cent.

Huelke said a collapsible steering column being used on many 1967 cars will diminish the number of rib injuries. He said thicker plastic laminate sandwiched between the glass in the windshields of 1966 cars may have been a factor in reducing injuries.

The scientist emphasized the importance of the collapsible steering column. "It is performance as expected, it will be the greatest safety advance since the seat belt."

One Twin Dies

The heart was covered by a plastic dome about two inches high, made in the hospital's prosthetic department for just that purpose, by the department head, Roy Walman.

Because of the difficulties with her heart, Sherry Ann was kept in the operating room Saturday night.

The first part of the operation, the division of the joined livers, was accomplished with "some difficulty," a hospital statement said.

PLASTIC MESH
"The remaining defect in the abdominal wall when they were separated was too large to cover with skin and it was necessary to use a plastic mesh."

Months of preparation went into the operation, which began about 9 a.m. The exact techniques paid off and "all phases went as planned beforehand by the surgical team," the hospital statement said.

HEART CONDITIONS
"The post-operative concern regarding the anatomical condition of the hearts was correct."

In amplifying the statement, hospital director John T. Law said the conditions were as Dr. Eardley S. Allen of Edmonton found them to be.

In the only one similar operation known to have been made in Canada, performed by Dr. Allen in 1950, the twins died.

TEAM ASSEMBLED
The skilled surgical team assembled and trained for the McGee operation had said conditions were reasonably good for success until Dr. Allen reported he found it impossible to restore hearts situation in a similar position.

Wages for first-class tradesmen rise to $3.76 an hour from $2.87, to $3.21 from $2.59 for mine drillers and to $2.67 from 2.22 for laborers.

FIVE EXTRA
Employees with five years' service or more are to get five weeks vacation every five years in addition to regular vacations.

All such holidays can be taken together or spread over a five-year period.

Employees with 30 years' service or more after July, 1968, will be able to retire at 62 on

Dr. Gilbert Kennedy, deputy attorney-general, said in an interview Friday night that prisoners in the new unit are being checked every 90 seconds.

Prisoners whose records indicate they are seriously disturbed are transferred to River-view Hospital, he said. Those less disturbed, but considered capable of attempting suicide will go into the new unit.

THREE RECENTLY
The move follows three suicides in the past three weeks among Oakalla inmates.

In the most recent case, Joseph Bernier, 37, formerly of St. Norbert, Man., was found Friday hanging from a bedsheet in his cell, hours before he was to appear in court to face habitual criminal proceedings.

IN SOLITARY
Earlier in the week, Paul Gibbs, 21, said by police to have been a welfare case during most of his life, was found hanging by his belt. He was serving a 15-month term for theft.

Edward Joseph Rose, 38, hanged himself Aug. 25 by using a strip of cloth torn from his mattress. Rose was serving 15 days in solitary confinement for an infraction of prison rules.

TWO TEAMS
Under his direction two complete operating teams were assembled for the triumphant ending Saturday of the comparatively few successful separations of Siamese twins anywhere in the world.

One team conducted the separation operation and the second stood by to receive one of the girls at a second operating table.

There's Plenty of Psychiatric Help

By JOSEPH MOLNER, MD

Dear Dr. Molner: How and where should I inquire about psychiatric help? I am not poverty stricken but I am far from being able to afford private help which I desperately need. I have two minor children and cannot carry out my duties as a mother in my present state of mind. — C.D.

There's no quick off-the-cuff answer to this question, but neither is the solution impossibly difficult.

Perhaps the biggest stumbling block is the idea, too generally held, that psychiatric help implies months of weekly or more frequent costly interviews.

Clearly that is impossible for anyone without substantial money to spend.

Here, though, is the fact: Rather brief periods of sympathetic understanding and the ability to put a patient's problems into clear perspective, and occasional subsequent often are all that is needed.

Granted that there aren't sufficient psychiatric services for all who need them, there are increasing services for those who seek them, and not at prohibitive cost.

How to find such services? There are ways:

● More general hospitals than people seem to realize now have psychiatric services. This is true in many small cities, not just the big ones.

● Clergymen (not all, but some) are aware of available services in a community, and can tell you how to get them.

● There are mental health societies all over the country. They know where to refer you.

● Not all physicians are familiar with psychiatric services, but many are. Ask your doctor. If he can't help, you still have these other avenues to explore.

● Public health departments are very much aware of such requests, and can tell you how best to proceed. Some clinics are available, although often overloaded.

Dear Dr. Molner: Two years ago my doctor told me I had serious depression. He gave me shots of liver extract six weeks in succession. Now the treatment is once in three weeks. Is there a cure? — W.B.

There is no cure, but injections of liver extract or Vitamin B12 keep the blood count up. In effect, this means that you can completely draw the fangs of what used to be a terrible disease.

The treatments must — and safely can — be continued for life. Usually frequent injections are needed at first until the blood count is raised to a normal level. After that, injections at longer intervals are sufficient to keep it normal. For some patients one injection every six or eight weeks is satisfactory. The frequency depends on how the blood count holds up and how the patient feels.

ALL YOU NEED IS MONEY?

ALL YOU GET IS TALK? THEN COME TO HOMEOWNERS FOR ACTION!

Freakish Wave Downs Copter

HONG KONG (AP) — As Cmdr. Dale Barck, a rescue helicopter pilot, told it Saturday:

"We are hovering there, at least 65 feet high, waiting to move into position, when all of a sudden we get this wall of water thrown smack in our faces."

What hit the U.S. Navy chopper on a mission to rescue 44 men aboard a foundering freighter was a wave, churned up to a freakish height by a typhoon.

It was the same typhoon that sent the 10,000-ton ore carrier August Moon crashing into Pratas Reef in the South China Sea Thursday. With four British officers and 40 Chinese from Hong Kong on board, she began breaking up, and the U.S. aircraft carrier Oriskany picked up her distress signals. The carrier is on patrol duty off Viet Nam.

Helicopters from the carrier 90 miles away reached the August Moon Friday morning. Rescue operations were running smoothly until Barck's chopper got knocked down by the wave. Other helicopters rescued the 44 crewmen in relays to and from the Oriskany. They also had to rescue Barck and his crew, Ens. Dan Kern, the co-pilot, and Petty Officer William Thoday.

"I have never known anything like it," said Barck, who has been flying the helicopters for more than 15 years.

"One second we are doing fine, and the next second we've got a dead engine soaked with sea water."

"We drop like a rock—that height you can't glide or windmill down. There's two bumps, a light one when we hit the water and two seconds later another that almost knocks our teeth out when we hit the rock bottom 20 feet below the waves. "The surf is pounding the helio to pieces," said Kern. "It's rolling the helio like a plaything. I think I got out on my side on the first roll. The command either came out right behind me or went out the other side on the next roll. Neither of us is sure just how we got out."

China Power Play Far from Over With Mao's Position in Danger

HONG KONG (UPI)—Powerful "enemies" within the Chinese Communist Party are plotting the overthrow of Mao Tse-tung, the official magazine of the central committee said today.

It indicated Red China, was in the throes of a titanic power struggle with Mao's purge of his opponents far from over.

The authoritative publication Red Flag repeatedly defined the "enemies" of Mao and his apparent heir, Defence Marshal Lin Biao, as "including party-borders in the highest posts."

They were not named, however.

POWER PLAY?

Observers here said logically this would be the clearest indication yet that President Lin Shao-Chi and those closest to him are leaders in the struggle for power being waged in mainland China.

Lin was regarded for years as Mao's heir-apparent and his recent downgrading in favor of Lin Biao appeared to support this thesis.

The editorial was published in Peking newspapers and relayed by Radio Peking in domestic broadcasts monitored in Hong Kong.

RED GUARD

Observers here said the editorial indicated that the youthful Red Guard movement had failed to intimidate elements within the party which had voiced opposition to some of Mao's policies.

(Soviet newspapers today carried denunciations of Mao and his "cultural revolution" by the British, Spanish, Czech and Bulgarian Communist parties. The British charged the campaign was aimed at the "deification" of Mao and wiping out opposition to his "fanatical, anti-Soviet" policy.)

HIGHEST LEVEL

The editorial in effect was an admission by Mao and Lin Biao that they still faced powerful and dangerous opposition.

Observers said it also made clearer than ever that the power struggle began at the highest party levels and obviously goes down to the rice roots.

Alluding to the successful diversion of some of the Red Guard activities by the intended targets, the magazine said, "the problem if direction is the most important thing in the current cultural revolutionary struggle."

"We must, according to the teachings of Mao Tse-tung be very able to distinguish who are our enemies and who are our friends," Red Flag quoted Lin Biao as saying.

"We must unite the majority for destroying the bourgeois elements and for completely destroying those power holders who tread the path of capitalism inside the party," Lin Biao said.

"Therefore," Red Flag added, "the revolutionary masses and revolutionary youth must master this primary direction of the current cultural revolutionary struggle."

"One longtime expert of China said it was significant that the editorial referred to the intrigues in the present tense.

"This certainly seems to indicate that they have not been successful in eliminating many important opponents," he said.

Unification Resisted

THE LEADER OF THE Liberal Party in Nova Scotia, Mr. Gerald Regan, has joined the swelling ranks of those who oppose the unification of the armed services into a single defence unit. Moreover, he is going to take the issue to the floor of the national party convention in Ottawa next month.

Like so many others, civilians and servicemen alike, he is concerned about the confusion and uncertainty due in large part to the apparent reluctance of Mr. Paul Hellyer, minister of national defence, to clarify the unification situation.

Mr. Hellyer has astutely avoided a straightforward definition of his plans, with the result that his critics have no specific targets. This is clever politics. If the pressures, represented by Mr. Regan's opposition, for example, become sufficiently severe Mr. Hellyer can always amend his formula to the point where it will meet all the objections of powerful critics and he will be able to say, with sweet innocence, that this is what he had intended all along. Thus the political image of this ambitious man will in no way be tarnished.

There is still hope that the unification issue will be decided without it becoming a strictly political engagement. But it is improbable, unless the minister modifies his plan for sinking the identities of the services. He would scarcely risk his reputation and his career on a free vote in the House of Commons. He must be sure of support. So in all probability the decision will be made at the Liberal convention.

If he finds there the opposition anticipated he may be constrained to amend his program.

There is the possibility, too, that other aspirants for leadership of the party may refuse the minister the open road to promotion his pioneering reconstruction of defence promises.

There may even be some, as Mr. Scott Young writes in the Toronto Globe and Mail, "who will not go along with the current defence department proposition that, when a serviceman becomes a brass hat, he almost automatically becomes a self-seeking idiot."

What the defence minister is saying in effect is, according to Mr. Young, "that if a man is so good at his profession that he rises to the top of it, he obviously is unfit to give counsel on future policy."

Not even the sorriest party hack can swallow that sort of blarney.

We cannot expect much from the Liberal-dominated defence committee of Parliament, and no more than debate in the House of Commons itself once the minister gets the nod of approval from his party.

It is at the convention, then, that the battle should be fought, and it is to be hoped that fair-minded and reasonable people will rally in force to the banner Mr. Regan is waving. He has a good cause, and one that might be expected to appeal to Capt. David Gross, MP, the retired naval officer who represents this constituency and chairs the parliamentary defence committee.

Over and Under

WHICH IS more important to mankind, to understand fully the nature of the earth below us or of the planets above? Because no one can be certain of what might be found through exploration in either direction, and because each field of knowledge is pertinent to the other, this may be a question that cannot be conclusively answered. And yet it will disappoint many scientists that the United States, pressing on upward, has dropped plans to look downward too, deeper than ever before.

In the struggle for government funds, the U.S. space program has come out the complete victor over Operation Mohole, which has been shelved by Congress and probably killed. This was a project to lower drilling equipment from a huge platform 15,000 feet to the ocean floor in the region of Hawaii and then to drill through the earth's crust — thinner under the ocean deeps than on land — to the underlying mantle of apparently plastic material. The mantle was expected to be encountered after about 18,000 feet of drilling.

As well as disclosing new evidence of rock structure in the innermost part of the crust, Mohole thus would hopefully have yielded geologists their first view and analysis of the substance of the mantle, and perhaps confirmation or denial of some of the theories on the causes and subterranean processes of those ancient and everlasting terrors, earthquakes and eruptions.

Beyond question the U.S. space program is more spectacular and therefore a greater prestige-earner than drilling a hole down from the sea-bottom, and because of its magnitude and the innumerable, diverse problems to be solved, more productive of scientific and technological side-benefits, too.

Yet it seems regrettable that Mohole had to be entirely put aside in favor of the race to the planets. And — one of the first assignments of U.S. lunar explorers being to bring back a bagful of moon rock — it may appear somewhat odd to distant generations that this trophy was taken from 239,000 miles over man's head when another, perhaps of more direct importance, was left untouched six miles under his feet.

Top Marks

A CANDIDATE in an election in Maryland has pretty well proved that it pays to have one's name first on the ballot. She had no campaign. Indeed she did not want to win. She ran only to take votes from the candidate who otherwise would have headed the list — her name being Hatfield and his Hogan — and she endorsed a third candidate by the name of Martin. But she came second and Martin third. A Mr. Viaw came last.

This is no strange phenomenon either, nor really in need of new proof. When in a municipal election nine or ten candidates run for three or four council seats, it is commonly observed in the results that many voters must start at the top of the ballot and exhaust their Xs by the time they get half-way down. There is some consolation for the Williamses and the Wilsons and the like in that some electors obviously start at the bottom and work up. But the system tends to be rough on the candidates in the middle.

There is something to be said then for the Maryland woman's suggestion that series of ballots should be printed, each with a different name first, "to at least distribute the irrelevant votes evenly."

Even the Coxes and Curtises and Bryants of municipal life would have to admit that this would be fairer.

Thinking Aloud

"... of shoes, and ships, and scaling waz ..."

By TOM TAYLOR

I SEE the Mounties are in the news again. They often are naturally enough, and they were in the Arena recently in person, man and beast.

And a glowing show they were.

But some folks are irked because Ottawa wants to abolish horsemanship from RCMP training and think therefore if this comes about then the force should change its name to Royal Canadian Motor Police.

Which doesn't have any kind of romantic ring at all.

All the horses won't go however so long as the Mounted Ride is retained. Nor will equestrian training in toto.

Hence, frankly, I don't know much about apart from gazing at them. When I was a young boy one knocked me down because I wasn't looking as I should have been, and later on a road not far from St. George's I ventured out another.

Quite obviously it recognized the ignorance on its back and began some fancy side-stepping which would have led to my undoing had I not got down pronto to terra firma.

But I was born in the age of horse traffic and always admired these splendid animals. When today I watch the tally-ho pass it is the team that pulls it not the passengers who evoke my interest.

For the workaday horse belongs to a passing breed. In an era when astronauts stroll in space, following in sequence all the wonders of the past half-century, one adapts oneself to the evolution of man and his ways.

And, I presume motor cars do the job nowadays better than horses.

That's no reason why the force need change its name, though. There's too much of this changing business going on as it is. Names tell of early associations and make history rich and interesting.

Would you have the roadway in Oak Bay called Fair Street get another name because it doesn't now lead, as once it did, to the gate of the Willows Fair? This would just rob this short thoroughfare of an intriguing caption. And without benefit to anyone.

So it is with the "Mounties." Even if most of them are never mounted and wouldn't do better in such role than I did in that episode of long ago, this legendary term is worth hanging on to.

But Mounties don't and never did just sit on horses. They work on foot, on snowshoes and in boats as well as on motor-cycles and in motor cars. Anyway, and comforting in this context, the fashion is that by "your initials we shall be known" and so long live RCMP.

We have a regular army regiment called Lord Strathcona's Horse, by the way, apparently with a chance now to keep this name even if they ceased to be called soldiers. And they don't have horses either.

Rebuff to France

Peking Demonstrates Contempt Despite Overtures From Paris

By GUY SEARLS
from Hong Kong

THE honeymoon of Peking and Paris has been going sour for many months now — there are those who will say it was only a marriage of convenience anyway.

The French, however, seem shocked. They were bewildered at Peking's blistering attacks on French colonialism, made just as President Charles de Gaulle was visiting Cambodia and condemning American actions in Viet Nam.

Paris despatches even describe the attacks as the first rupture in good relations between the two countries. Actually there have been many anti-French declarations in the Peking press, and they have been increasing in number and bitterness since the beginning of this year.

Even when the French recognized Communist China in January, 1964, the Chinese were not fully sold on President de Gaulle and his government. In a bitter attack on the Soviet Union just three months before, Peking denounced Moscow for maintaining friendship with the "French imperialists" and "people like de Gaulle." The article was reprinted several times following recognition and was included in a bound collection of anti-Soviet essays published by Peking last year.

The key to China's part in the Peking-Paris friendship was the French president's anti-American attitudes. In fact, the French recognition itself was hailed in the Peking People's Daily as a move against America. While the Chinese were finding common cause with the French in anti-American policies, they still maintained a general distrust of France as a capitalist, colonialist power. The ambivalence of Peking's attitude toward France has become more evident.

In a review of 1965 published by the New China News Agency last December 31, the Chinese dwelt at length on growing "U.S.-French antagonisms."

They listed such things as President de Gaulle's anti-American statements; French opposition to American intervention in Viet Nam and the Dominican Republic; the French rejection of the dollar as a world currency; French refusal to contribute to United Nations peace-keeping efforts in the Congo; French boycotts of the Common Market and the "Kennedy Round" of talks on tariff and trade, and French demands for reorganization of NATO.

While these Paris actions obviously pleased Peking, the Chinese were showing their contempt of the French government in reporting a series of strikes sweeping France. Peking press reports told of workers' dissatisfaction with French government policies, of the government's "failure to keep its word" and the "just demands" of the workers against the government.

Relations were not sufficiently strained, however, to prevent France and China from signing a commercial air agreement on June 1. But on June 20, President de Gaulle started a 10-day visit to the Soviet Union, where he received exceptional treatment from the Russians. Peking's reporting of this event showed obvious irritation. It was followed up on July 9 with a series of anti-French resolutions passed by the Chinese-inspired Afro-Asian Writers' Conference which was meeting in Peking.

The resolutions dealt with France's African possessions of Senegal and Comoros Islands and her former colonies of Niger, Malagasy and the Cameroons. In the former, the French were accused of "inhuman atrocities" and "barbarous actions." In the latter, the freedom granted the colonies was described as "shameful independence" and there was even a call for armed action against "French neo-colonialism."

And on July 12, the Chinese cancelled the privilege of French travel agents to book tourist trips to China. Two days later, in what may have been an attempt to get Peking-Paris relations back on the track approved by China, Foreign Minister Chen Yi announced that China was "willing to make joint efforts with the French" to "wage a common struggle against the United States." The United States in regard to Viet Nam demands a complete American surrender. This must be followed by a Communist take-over of South Viet Nam. President de Gaulle's call for a simple American withdrawal from Viet Nam and a neutralization of the country is not in keeping with Chinese desire.

In fact, most world leaders who have sought a peaceful solution to the Viet Nam question have been called "criminals" in the Peking press.

Such has been the fruit of efforts made by Prime Minister Harold Wilson, the United Nations Secretary-General U Thant, and India's Prime Minister Jawahar Lal Nehru.

President de Gaulle has been spared such a condemnation, probably not so much because he is President de Gaulle of France as because his peace efforts were made jointly with Cambodia's Prince Sihanouk, whom the Chinese do not want to offend.

The Chinese have shown their disapproval in their own way — by treating the French president's Viet Nam peace efforts with complete silence.

Question and Answer

There's No Escape, Says Bob Kennedy

By PHILIP DEANE

THIS is the report of a conversation with Senator Robert Kennedy:

Q — Is there room for the Negro, senator, in the American dream?

A — Certainly; but we must build this room.

Q — By giving the Negro the opportunity to enjoy better schools, to live in neighborhoods where he can find jobs?

A — So that he'll come into contact with the whites and better his condition by enjoying their advantages?

A — That, and because it is the Negro's right. The American dream is his, too.

Q — Isn't escape a basic human instinct, considered as a right by most humans? Isn't the right to escape a part of the American dream?

A — How do you mean?

Q — America was founded by people who wanted to flee the old world's problems. The Americans have been fleeing the New World's problems, fleeing to the suburbs, fleeing away from the Negro ghetto.

A — The Negro now demands the right to follow the fleeing whites in hot pursuit.

A — One can't flee. Problems, not people, follow us. In any case, it is our duty to stand and face the problems.

Q — Isn't that a minority opinion, senator?

A — I don't think so. I think that a majority of the whites want to solve these problems.

Q — Solve or escape?

A — There's no escape.

Q — Isn't this crisis twisting the entire American way of life?

A — No. Troubles are a source of strength. The country's fibre could be strengthened. Struggle can make for improvement.

Q — Isn't the struggle tarnishing America's image abroad?

A — Yes, unfortunately.

***

Q — And the war in Viet Nam?

A — That too harms us; it makes a bad impression because people misinterpret our motives.

Q — Isn't it twisting the American character?

A — How?

Q — By forcing you into acts that are out of character with your opinion of yourselves.

A — It's a trial. We might learn through it; we might improve.

A — Oh yes.

Q — It is a problem you will be facing personally, in public life, for many years.

A — Yes.

Q — Yet you stay in public life, sacrificing a good deal of your private life.

A — I have no other choice.

Q — Why not?

A — I cannot conceive of another way of living.

Q — You like this frenetic life?

A — It's my life.

Q — To persevere, you must have a strong conviction that you are good ... that you are better?

He did not answer. He smiled and remained calmly silent. He had said nothing he had not intended to say. Someone remarked that I had asked questions Kennedy would not answer until after leaving the presidency in 1969.

Time Capsule

Jam Session A War Effort

JAM-MAKING time 25 years ago saw the jam committee working under the auspices of the Red Cross Society and the Victoria Local Council of Women appealing for donations of prunes, plums, crab-apples, pears or any other fruits for a Saturday session in the Public Market Building.

"It is hoped a large supply of jam for overseas will be made within the next few weeks," the Colonist reported.

A collection of aluminum was about to take place in all the schools, public and private.

"I want to tell you," said the commander of the Salvage Corps of B.C. in a message to the community, "that this work is no hobby ... This aluminum lying in your basement will not save you — made into planes it will help."

Prohibition and woman suffrage had been approved in referendums that were part of a provincial election which brought a Liberal government to power in a startling upset, 55 years ago.

The election, the Colonist said, could hardly fail to have a very important effect upon the future of the province.

"Especially is this likely to grow true of woman suffrage. The numerical strength of the electorate will be doubled, or very nearly so."

"We are not of those who think we see the dawn of the millennium because women are to enjoy the right to vote; but the change will certainly have a tendency to dislocate all political organizations as they exist today."

The complaints have still not entirely disappeared a half-century later, but Alderman John had just succeeded in having city council pass his bylaw "to protect the city against the noxious gases from the chemical works at the other wharves and the showers of charred sawdust that of late have been poured from the chimneys of sawmills around the harbor."

A reception was to be tendered to the public at Mount Tobiue Park, 75 years ago, by the developers of a subdivision there, and hundreds of citizens were said to have signified their intention of attending.

Buses were to carry visitors from the street car line at Jubilee Hospital to Mount Tobiue: "The large bus 'Young America' and four other covered buses have been engaged, and the use of ten carriages secured if required. Visitors will find an hourly conveyance from Jubilee Hospital during the forenoon, and to meet every train on in the afternoon. Every effort will be made to make the occasion a pleasant one. Lunch will be provided."

Street-lighting in Victoria was not too reliable in 1891, and the Colonist contained a caustic note: "The electric light committee's good fairy, the moon, made the latter part of last evening a brilliant contrast with the early hours."

"New landings (from the ship Royal Tar, from London) and for sale at Victoria House on Fort Street," 100 years ago, were new fall goods. They included:

Aberdeen winseys, French merinos, coburgs and alpaca; embroidered linens and robes; winter skirts and shirtings; winter shawls and mantles; waterproof tweed mantles; flannels, white and scarlet; ladies' shirts and children's woollen and merino hosiery; knitted wool hosiery and pullovers; a large assortment; superior family blankets; superior white sheeting and quilts; Irish linens; table oil cloths and crumb cloths; black glass vases and rich moire antique silks; rich French bonnets shawls "and a large assortment of fancy goods too numerous to particularize."

Money for War

Danes Call a Halt To Reds' Cash Drive

By ROLAND HUNTFORD from Copenhagen

THE Danish government has prohibited public collections in aid of the Viet Cong. They have been moved to do so by the activities of young Danes who are sympathetic with the North in the Viet Nam war — the nearest European equivalent of the American "Vietniks."

A "Viet Nam Committee" was formed in Copenhagen some time ago by a small group of young extremists of the Left. They established direct contact with a Viet Cong office in Prague, and claimed to be recruiting volunteers in Denmark to fight against the Americans in Viet Nam. It is unlikely that any Danes have answered the call but, formally at least, there remains a recruiting committee in the country — presumably the only one in Western Europe.

The Danish Left still contains significant elements that belong little to the dinosaur age of politics. There are Trotskyists and Syndicalists and a number of other believers in direct action. What is peculiar about their Danish incarnation is that, unlike other countries, they are not elderly gentlemen reliving the battles of their youth, but young enthusiasts preserving the beliefs of the old.

Such activists are found in the Young Communists, in Social Democratic youth organizations, and among Left-wing students, and it is they who have formed the Viet Nam Committee. They have been collecting money among known sympathizers and sending it to the Viet Cong, presumably through Prague. They have not attempted to hide behind humanitarian aims. They have said (as has a similar Swedish group) that they have turned over the proceeds with no reservations whatsoever and that as far as they are concerned, the money has gone to buy arms.

The Danish authorities have not viewed this with enthusiasm, but since the collection has up to now been a private affair they have not interfered. The Viet Nam Committee, however, has suddenly decided to "go public." A curious sidelight on this is that some of the committee are "Chinese" Communists, and that their recent activity seems to have coincided with the activities of the Red Guards in China. At all events, the prospect of widespread Viet Cong propaganda in Denmark has disturbed the Danish government, which has decided to take precautionary steps.

Official permission must always be obtained before making collections in Denmark. The Viet Nam Committee made an application about a month ago. It has been refused.

The official answer to the committee was: "After an exchange of letters with the foreign ministry, we regret to inform you that your application cannot be granted. It must be added that in the opinion of the ministry of justice, it does not satisfy the requirements of the law regarding public collections."

***

It is quite clear therefore that implications abroad influenced the decision. It is not inconceivable that the Chinese embassy — as in similar circumstances in Stockholm — has been directly involved in the committee's demonstrations. The proposed collection and the symbolic "recruiting office" in Copenhagen could be used as little straws of encouragement and propaganda in any campaign to keep Hanol and, particularly the Viet Cong leaders, on a hard line. Russian diplomats and Danish Communists of the Moscow school have kept well clear of the Viet Nam Committee.

The Committee, in best activist fashion, claims that it will not accept the government decision; they may be fortified by the knowledge that fines can be the only penalty. Meanwhile, they have thousands of Viet Cong "stamps" to dispose of. These are stickers with suitable revolutionary motifs. They cost four kroner (45 cents) each, and the proceeds will be turned over to the Viet Cong.

It seems that, by a quirk of Danish law, the sale of these stickers cannot be prohibited. It will go to help the Viet Cong and North Viet Nam acquire hard currency. It seems that all such collections have to be converted into American dollars before transfer to Prague.

Today In History

First World War: Fifty years ago today—in 1916—the Greek army bowed to Allied pressure and gave up its arms at Kavalla. French units captured Florina, Macedonia. British units at the Somme took a pillbox between Glitney and Bouleaux Wood.

Second World War: Twenty-five years ago today—in 1941—Germans on the Russian front isolated the Crimean peninsula. British submarines attacked three Italian liners, striking two. The RAF shot down 17 German aircraft for 11 losses in the daylight sweeps over France. Russia called up all men aged 16 to 60.

Students Import Voices of Controversy

In coming days Victoria is going to be enriched and unsettled by its increasingly active university students. Hopefully, the community will be sophisticated enough to appreciate both experiences.

An impressive list of Canadian and international figures will be brought here to speak this winter by the all-student Political Science Forum. Gordon Pollard, president of the forum, is actively making the public welcome to these events.

James Meredith, first Negro student at the University of Mississippi, will speak here on Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the university gymnasium.

A cosmopolitan line-up will follow Meredith. It includes Melvin Bell, Black Muslim Elijah Muhammad, Robert Winters, Walter Gordon, John Kenneth Galbraith, John Diefenbaker, Alexander Kerensky, Lord Charles Moran, David Ben Gurion, ambassadors of the USSR, Israel, the United Arab Republic, Cuba and South Africa, possibly William Buckley, Jr., Douglas Harkness, La Pierre, LaPierre, Charles Lynch and Erik Nielsen. There are more to be announced.

This is pretty rich fare for a city which is outside the big-name lecture circuit. And yet anyone will be able to hear most of these people for no more expense than driving to the Gordon Head campus.

It was the Political Science Forum which was responsible for the interview with philosopher Bertrand Russell reprinted on this page last week.

Other campus organizations will bring numerous artistic events this winter which the public will be invited to share. In November the students will present Canada 99, a three day examination of our country by authorities in many fields, and from several provinces.

The tone of the whole community is being improved by the 3,500 energetic young men and women of the university. Only Victorians who have lived in Canada's drearier small towns can appreciate what difference the university makes.

Living in a university town in 1966 also involves the risk of having your comfortable old ideas challenged. This is going to happen increasingly in months and years to come.

The campaign to abolish all financial and social barriers to higher education has just begun in Canada. As we pointed out two weeks ago, the new spirit of militancy is gathering strength.

One year ago the Canadian Union of Students at its annual conference adopted the principle of "universal accessibility" to higher education. As the first step it called for the elimination of tuition fees. Last winter's protest at the University of Victoria against rising fees was the result.

A week ago in Halifax the 1966 CUS conference went a step further. Spearheaded by Victoria delegates and others, the progressive wing of the organization pushed through a policy statement calling for student stipends.

In other words, CUS wants university students to be paid a living allowance. The notion is years ahead of public thinking (even though it's been practised in the USSR for a long time), and this is recognized by student council president Stephen Bigsby.

"It may take 20 years, but this is our goal," said the well-spoken 19-year-old last week. "We just said: 'What's the best system — politicians and public opinion aside?' This was the answer." To sell their ideas, student leaders here plan to organize

Kerensky
Russia's only Democratic prime minister a speakers pool which will offer spokesmen to address service clubs and other groups this winter.

Stephen Bigsby hopes to set up a full-time lobby to operate during the 1967 session of the legislature. He envisions a students from UBC and Simon Fraser University coming here to participate on the lobby.

Probably their first goal will be equalization grants for out-of-town students. The new B.C. Assembly of students discovered during the provincial election campaign that this idea is acceptable to the public.

In keeping with the concept of universal accessibility, teams of students and professors may go out from Victoria to speak in smaller centres about educational opportunity.

Our students deserve to be heard, not as messiahs but as responsible young men and women with new ideas which they are willing to back with logic.

Their record and their gifts to the community have earned respect. Though their ideas may be unacceptable, they rate more than dismissal as "them smart-alec college kids."

Nothing to Replace Health Board

Vacuum Created

This Metropolitan Board of Health business could develop into a real mess and if it does a good part of the blame will rest squarely on the shoulders of the provincial government.

In about three months there will be no health board and at this point there is nothing to take its place. Principal reason for this is that the provincial government at the last session failed to pass legislation to cope with this situation.

The provincial department of health was fully aware that the city and the other urban members of the board, Oak Bay and Esquimalt, were going to pull out and torpedo the board, and legislation was promised to deal with the situation.

The anxiously awaited legislation was never even introduced. In order to get action on what the city considered to be an impossible set-up, Victoria, on July 1, gave notice that it would withdraw in six months. Oak Bay and Esquimalt followed.

The "impossible" arose from the fact that the three urban municipalities were paying five times as much per capita as the rural members, and the added fact that the city felt that a little empire was being built up over on Cook Street — an empire which was becoming divorced from municipal control.

CITY HALL COMMENT

By A. H. MURPHY

Disappointed that legislation was not passed to take care of the impending crack-up of the board, the city nonetheless pressed on in its effort to get some sort of a solution or decisive answer from the provincial government — to no avail. Nor was Victoria alone in its effort. The Reeves of Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Saanich (which although rural wanted to see a definitive plan) and the chairman of the health board, Reeve Lee, of Central Saanich, all gave their support.

Victoria did not go to the government empty-handed and ask the provincial department to conjure something out of thin air. The deputations took along a reasonable, detailed proposal, whereby the whole district health issue could be brought under regional control. It would, one would have thought, been a solution acceptable to the government which is fostering regional government across the province.

Well, at this time, with dissolution of the health board three months away, we still don't seem to have anything prepared to take its place.

Victoria is not in a bad position as most of the board staff are city employees and, one presumes, services will carry on as usual.

And, I suppose, arrangements will be made with the other participating municipalities to provide services — after all no one is going to cancel out health care.

The danger is that unless something better than the metro board of health is brought into being the district could slide back into the old pre-metro confusion — the overlapping between municipalities, the administrative tangles and the general untidy situation out of which metro was born.

Province Cannot Afford To Lose Bonner's Services

British Columbians will be doing the province a disservice at this time in its history if they do not see that Attorney-General Robert Bonner is returned to the legislature. This man is one of the most capable members in the Social Credit cabinet and the government would be hard-pressed to find anyone to take his place.

He is also one of the few cabinet ministers considered in the running for the leadership of his party when Premier Bennett decides a few years from now to retire from active politics — even though the Sept. 12, 1966 defeat will be a blemish on his 14-year record.

The defeat of Mr. Bonner was a quirk of fate — not simply a reflection of public opinion — and, ironically, it was the actions of his own government that brought his ouster.

The stage for the attorney-general's downfall was set during the last session of the legislature, when the government brought in its provincial redistribution bill, reducing Vancouver Point Grey's representation in the House from three to two members.

This gave Dr. Pat McGeer, who led the polls there in the 1963 election, and his Liberal running mate, lawyer Garde Gardom, a decided edge in the 1966 campaign, because the voters went to the polls they voted for a party slate instead of individual candidates.

News that Mr. Bonner had been edged out of the seat he held since June, 1953, may have come as a shock to a lot of people. But a warning it could happen was sounded by Dr. Henry F. Angus, when he advised the government to abolish the multiple member riding system.

Dr. Angus' royal commission report on redistribution pointed out that multiple member ridings "many completely extinguish an important minority." It also stated that "a weak candidate may get in on the merits of his party colleagues."

The government rejected this portion of Dr. Angus' report when it prepared its bill for the House, and created seven two-member ridings in Greater Vancouver and Victoria.

And just as Dr. Angus had warned, the strongest candidates dragged their running mates to victory in every one of the new dual member ridings.

Social Credit won the battle. It picked up all the dual seats in Victoria, Vancouver Centre, Vancouver Little Mountain and Vancouver South, but lost the dual seats in Vancouver Burrard and Vancouver East to the NDP, and the two Vancouver Point Grey seats to the Liberals.

It cost the Socials the loss of one of their strongest cabinet ministers in exchange for another five-year term and the lion's share of the 14 seats from the dual riding areas.

The only hope that Mr. Bonner has of regaining a seat in the legislature is for a Social in another riding to resign so the attorney-general can run there in a by-election.

Mr. Bonner is a key man in the cabinet and since the people have just returned the Social government for another five years, it would be a great loss to the province if the public turns its back on him at this time.

Iran Crown Jewels Beyond Evaluation

By JERRY BOULTBEE

Ed Tiffany ran the beads of the curtain through his hand, and turned to his companion. "They're just glass, Cy," he said good-naturedly, addressing local jeweller Cy Williams.

E. B. Tiffany was probably one of the world's foremost authorities on gems.

A gemologist of international repute, and gem buyer for Birk's in Toronto, Mr. Tiffany has recently returned to Canada from a trip to Iran where he and a team of four experts from the Royal Ontario Museum examined the crown jewels and state treasure of the country.

He was interviewed at the Imperial Inn where, catching sight of a glass bead curtain, he took it in his hands and jokingly pronounced it a "fake."

"I've not the least hesitation in saying it's the finest gem collection in the world — absolutely priceless," said Mr. Tiffany.

He has the same name as a famous jeweller store in New York — and, indeed, he is a distant relation of the founders of the New York firm.

STAFF MEETING

In Victoria to attend a staff meeting of Birk's and to show slides of the Toheran gems, Mr. Tiffany explained how he had come to be one of the first "outsiders" ever to handle the state jewels.

The Canadian team of experts succeeded in obtaining permission to view and give the first scientific study to the gems only after a year of requests and patient waiting.

Five senior Iranian state officials had to be present at all times as the gems were being viewed — "and we were watched constantly by a horde of armed guards," Mr. Tiffany explained.

Showing slides of the gems, Mr. Tiffany explained that one case containing just five rubies was worth "well over $1,000,000."

Canadian Expert Impressed

The entire collection — consisting of stones that have never been counted or valued — is actually beyond possible evaluation.

A tiny eight-inch bowl made of rubies and emerald with gold was valued at more than $1,000,000.

IMPRESSIONED "I can't use enough superlatives in describing this treasure," said Mr. Tiffany.

"I've bought gems in all parts of the world, and I know quality when I see it. But this collection far surpassed anything I've ever seen before."

Famine Toll 10,000 Reports Indonesia

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) —

More than 10,000 persons starved to death in 35 villages checked between last November and April on the small island of Lombok, figures showed today.

Dr. Arban Yusuf, provincial health director for the island said the figures were the result of a detailed study in only 35 of more than 150 villages in the island's famine belt.

Yusuf's report appeared to give new credence to a student claim from the island that more than 29,000 people died in the same period throughout the whole famine belt.

Lombok, with a population of 1,500,000 people, also is seriously hit by disease. However, only half the island is short of food. The northern part of the island has two crops of rice a year and the people are hoarding it from those starving just a few miles away.

The quarantine bans the movement from the area of soil, plants or plant parts, containers and machinery or equipment with soil attached, unless approved by an Officer of the Plant Protection Division.

The quarantined land districts are North Saanich, South Saanich, Lake, Victoria, Esquimalt, Metcheson, Goldstream, Highland, Malahat, Otter and Sooke.

Allegiance Switches From Pigs to Wolf

By WILLIAM THOMAS

If parents are afraid of Virginia Wolf, then they ought to take their children to see the Big Bad Wolf played by the multi-talented Bill Hosie.

He stars in the McPherson Playhouse production of Bastion Theatre's Three Little Pigs. The Ralph Kendall comedy for children opened its matinee run at the McPherson to a full ground floor house Saturday.

AUDIENCE PARTICIPATION Stars of the show are without doubt the children who make up the audience.

Toothless and fond of Guinness stout, the Big Bad Wolf is really a figure of pity who soon has the children telling him just what the Little Pigs are up to.

DOUBLE USE

The set, used during the summer for an outdoor show, fits perfectly into the Art Person design for School for Wives.

Mr. Penon, who is knocking himself out in the Moliere classic, turns in a very wistful butterfly that entranced his young fans.

CAST

The three pigs are played by Ian Pool, Margaret Martin and Barry Flanagan with Miss Martin easily dominating the trio.

The show has everything children delight in, as evidenced by the King of the Leprechauns and his servile Hawk. This mythical bird with black wings drew gasps and cries of "Batman! Batman!" but no one seemed to mind.

LOTS OF ACTION

Bad Wolf Hosie slurped his cold asparagus soup and managed to trip over his shadow countless times as his audience screamed and yelped with delight.

There were the inevitable chases around the theatre as director Peter Marnering just stood and gaped, wondering what the cast might improvise next.

The Three Little Pigs will

This Act provides that operator and other riders shall ride only astride the seats provided except a passenger in a side car. Sitting "Side saddle" is prohibited. The responsibility for complying with the regulation is charged to both the operator and the passenger.

As of the 1st of October, 1965, Learners drivers' licences will be restricted so that a person learning to drive a motorcycle will not be allowed to carry a passenger on the motorcycle.

Those taking tests on autocycles or motor-scooters will receive a licence limiting driving to that type of vehicle.

Story with a Molar

PATRICK O'NEILL Backstage

In the grand-old-trouper-carries-on memory book must go the name of Bill Hesse.

The young singer-dancer-actor, who plays an aging Scottish skink in School for Wives, made his first exit in a blackout just before intermission at the Thursday preview.

That is, he almost made it. He hit a bench, crashed in the darkness, and his lip was badly out.

FINGERS CROSSED

In the dressing room, officials found Bill had driven his teeth into his lip, making a serious laceration.

Ice was applied, and fingers were crossed, because Bill is not only the lead, but is onstage virtually the whole play.

After a slightly longer than normal intermission, Bill was back, his lip rather cool — singing dancing and acting with a skillful gusto that brought him waves of applause.

Two contemporary one-act French plays will be brought to Victoria by the Simon Fraser University Theatre Company.

The plays are Orison and Fando and Lis, together titled The Savage God.

Both plays were written by Fernando Arrabal and will be presented in the Phoenix Theatre, Gordon Head Campus, at 8:30 p.m. Sept. 30 and Oct. 1.

The plays were translated from the French by the director, J. C. Julian, and were premiered under Julian's direction in Montreal in 1962.

Arrabal is a 34-year-old

Spaniard who now makes his home in France. His roots are existentialist.

A seminar on the two plays will be held Oct. 1 at 2:30 p.m. with director and cast participating.

Tony Elise's A-GO-Go on Wharf Street is only open Friday, Saturday, and Sunday for the fall season.

Don Crawford and the Right People now are playing dates in Vancouver, but are coming back for a week's rest before going on tour.

Gipp Forster has big plans for the future of The Music Hall in the basement of the Century Inn. He is in the process of acquiring a majority interest in the club.

He hopes to complete a deal to bring to Victoria top folk music acts who hit Vancouver on their tours.

London Police Raid Ripping, Far-Out Art

LONDON (UPI) — Police moved in on a "destruction in art" performance run by far-out artists in the heart of London's newspaper belt Friday night and confiscated a film and some equipment.

The reasons for the confiscation were not immediately known and no arrests were made.

Gustav Metzger, secretary of the Destruction in Art Symposium, said his group has been running the "happening"-type shows at the St. Bride's Institute just off Fleet Street.

During the performance, described as "a new type of theatre", a dead lamb was disembowelled on stage by Hermann Nitsch, 28, of the Vienna Institute of Direct Art.

"I am working with reality and not with illusions," he said. "There is no play — it is all really happening. The traumatic construction of the play is modelled on the laws of psychoanalysis."

Elizabeth Taylor Appealing

PORTLAND (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor has 10 days to appeal a ruling that says she must defend herself against a charge that her conduct with Richard Burton damaged the box office appeal of the film Cleopatra.

Judge John Kilkenney denied a new motion to dismiss the case, but allowed 10 days for an appeal, saying there were enough grounds for a difference of opinion.

The Paramount Theatre in asking more than $44,000 in damages charging the actress' conduct with Burton, as well as critical statements about the movie, damaged box office receipts.

Earlier, Miss Taylor's attorney asked the court to rule that, since she had never been in the state nor done business in it, she could not be held in the suit. The judge rejected that, too.

To add frosting to the Confederation centennial cake, a subsidiary organization Festival Canada will offer top Canadian and international entertainment to provincial centennial committees.

LAURENCE OLIVIER

In addition to shows from across Canada, Festival Canada has arranged tours for the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, the National Theatre of Great Britain with Sir Laurence Olivier and the Roland Petit ballet company from France.

Canadian contributions will include Don Messer and his Islanders from Halifax and the Neptune Theatre from the same city.

NOUVEAU MONDE

From the Charlottetown Festival, the musical Anne of Green Gables. From Montreal, Le Theatre de Nouveau Monde, the Montreal Symphony Orchestra, Le Theatre de Rideau Vert and Les Feux-Follets.

From Ontario, the Stratford

Festival Company, the National Ballet of Canada and the National Youth Orchestra. From Manitoba, the Manitoba Theatre Centre. From British Columbia, Joy Coghill's Holiday Theatre.

TWO EVENTS

So far no decisions have been made on just what shows will play here but examination of the booking sheet at the Royal Theatre show manager Martin Cave has reserved space for the folk ballet show Les Feux-Follets and the Stratford Festival Company.

These are tentative booking but it seems safe to assume the shows will play next year. The Bay is sponsoring the folk ballet.

LOT OF COMPANIES

A total of 16 companies will be on the road from January to December.

Programming for British Columbia will be in the hands of the provincial centennial committee under the chairmanship of L. J. Wallace.

With the application of a little on, bass, Buster Bailey on imagination and a lot of money this could be quite a birthday party.

The Victoria school of Music will release names of tuition scholarship winners this week. Enrollment at the school is expected to top all previous figures.

BRIGHT PROSPECT

Brightest prospect on the summer in study with the entertainment horizon must be the Oct. 17 appearance of Louis Armstrong and his all stars at Memorial Arena.

Cast includes George Cattet to study chamber playing.

Pupils of symphony concertmaster Jean Angers will get the benefit of their teacher's studies this year with master violinist Galamian.

Mr. Angers has spent the summer in study with the renowned teacher and will introduce his methods into his own teaching. Next summer Mr. Angers will return to New York.

British Post Office Flips

Phone Book Yeah-Yeah-Yeah

LONDON (UPI)—A British pop music group called the Mustard Singers thought their fans would "dig" their latest record, but it seemed only the post office flipped the number was definitely out of order, said a post office spokesman.

The group, four school teachers who had recorded the British safe driving code earlier this year and put it into the hit parade, wanted to try their luck by changing a selection of names and addresses from the London Telephone directory. And it went like this:

Trap Here Soon

B.C. Movie Saved By Tush, Scenery

LONDON (CP)—The Trap, an Anglo-Canadian experiment in movie-making which tells a blood-and-guns story of pioneer days in the B.C. backwoods, was greeted on its world premiere here Friday with mixed reactions from London critics.

The movie, shot in color on location in the remote forests of northwestern B.C., was financed jointly by Britain's Rank organization and a group of Vancouver businessmen.

NINE CANADIANS

It stars Rita Tushingham and Oliver Reed, with nine supporting roles filled by Canadians recruited in Toronto and Montreal.

The Trap, scheduled for Canadian release in October, tells of a rough French-Canadian trapper who buys a wife for $1,000, a terrified, mute girl who was struck dumb with shock while watching her mother raped and slain by Indians.

AXE AMPUTATION

The trapper fights wolves, cougars and bears, gets his foot crushed in a bear trap and forces his frightened bride to amputate it with a wood-chopper's axe.

The gory story is relieved by splendors of the mountain and forest scenery and a heart-stirring performance from Tush.

Several critics felt these were the only assets that saved the film from its cardboard characters and money-labile, Me Tushian dialogue.

TWO 'SUPERB'

Ann Pacey of The Sun found the "thrilling, unswerving, beautifully photographed and relentlessly grim," distinguished by "superb" performances from Tushingham and Reed.

David Robinson of The Financial Times panned the story as "ludicrous almost beyond belief," criticized the "sordidness" of some scenes and remarked the movie appeared "yet another ill-fated attempt to launch feature film productions in Canada."

Alexander Walker of The Evening Standard praised it as a modest film that "derives a power and splendor from its scenery and the genuine sense of pioneering in wild places that it creates."

City Band On Way

A Victoria band, the Canadian Strangers, is off to England Sept. 30.

William Harris, Prof. of Violin, will accept students at the Studio, 101 Campbell Building, corner of Douglas and Fort, as of September 21st.

Dear Mr. Harris:
 I am most interested to know that you will soon be teaching in Victoria. This is another proof of the renewed interest in violin playing—interest which I know your teaching will enhance.

Opportunities There But Museum Isn't

Elwood White's a railroad buff, so he has strong feelings on the subject — namely that Victoria could have a first-rate transportation museum, and he's not.

"Somebody up there isn't on the ball," he complained Saturday.

He feels civic and provincial authorities have blundered time and again when faced with opportunities to acquire good pieces for a museum of the kind he has in mind.

THROUGH NOSE

"They've had golden opportunities to collect really good stuff for a worthwhile museum — but they've turned them down. Then, on occasions when they do want something special, they pay through the nose."

He was referring specifically to what he calls "the Dunrobin farce."

"The government paid thousands and thousands to acquire that engine. It has nothing to do with B.C., and has no business whatever being shown here as part of our centennial celebration. It's an English engine of a type never used on the West Coast. It was brought here strictly as a tourist gimmick."

ONE IN DUNCAN

On the other hand, said Mr. White, there are engines on Vancouver Island — one specifically in Duncan — that are far more historically important, and would cost less to buy and fix.

"People have given me, over the years, three locomotives and two speeders — plus numerous other pieces of equipment."

"I'd gladly see them lodged in a proper museum — but the answer, whenever I broach the subject to civic or government officials, was 'Thanks, pal — you move it and maintain it, and we'll be glad to take the glory. It was a little discouraging.'"

DOCKYARD MAN

Employed by the motor transport department at the dockyard, Mr. White has a story of railroad interest in the current issue of Railroad Magazine.

Apart from a brief spell when he was employed by the Pacific Great Eastern, Mr. White has never been a railroader.

"You find railroaders never become railroad bugs the way I am. Perhaps they see too much of it or something," he said.

His specialty in railroad history is logging and mining railroading in British Columbia — and he's probably one of the leading authorities on the subject.

"It's got to a point where the companies will come to me now to find out how they operated 'way back,'" he said.

He took out a flying licence in 1937, but served in a ship's engine room all through the war. His flying licence has lapsed "because it's just cost too much money raising kids and such."

MAKES START

Apart from his peevish about those who don't go for transport museums, Mr. White has started a large collection of railroads, including company documents relating to logging railroads.

The upstairs of his house at 2673 Sooke Road is like a museum itself, and around his house and property there's a collection that includes two speeders, 40 railroads' photos, negatives, books and models.

"A lot of it's the sort of stuff that would go well in a museum," he commented dryly.

Civil Servants To Voice Complaints

The 5,000 federal civil servants in the Greater Victoria area were urged Saturday to bring their problems into the open as soon as possible.

The advice came from Gordon Campbell, speaking on behalf of federal public servants represented by the Civil Service Federation of Canada and the Civil Service Association of Canada.

The two groups will merge as the Public Service Alliance of Canada in November.

IMMEDIATE ACTION

"No matter what the problem or question may be, all federal public servants are being challenged at this time to bring their problems into the open or forget it," said Mr. Campbell.

The impending unity of the two groups, plus the collective bargaining rights being granted by the government, presents an opportunity never before available.

MEETING TUESDAY

He said all federal civil servants in this area were invited to attend a meeting at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the War Amps Hall, 1610 Oak Bay Ave., when the objectives of the new organization will be outlined.

Mr. Campbell added: "Now it is up to the employees themselves, whether at present members or non-members of associations, to look for redress of their problems."

"Whether it is a problem of pay or one concerning their own association, or resulting from the current reclassification program, it will be listened to at Tuesday's meeting."

YOUNG ARTISTS

Young artists who painted in the park during the summer gathered at the Art Gallery for scholarship and prize awards Saturday.

Head Injuries:

Diagnoses Touchy Job

"Doctor, he is not like the man I married. He ain't good for nothing, if you know what I mean. He can't stand the kids yelling and he can't take a drink without getting the screaming premises."

"I'm sick and tired of seeing his face around the house. Can't you fix him up and get him back to work and give me a break?"

The illustration was used this week by Dr. Robert M. Peet, Victoria neurologist, to point out to workmen's compensation experts the difficulties involved in diagnosing and treating cases of head injuries.

REACTIONS VARY

"One must realize that some people's brains and personalities, just like other organs, can and do react differently to injurious insult in different individuals," he said.

Dr. Peet recalled the reactions of two other patients who suffered similar head injuries.

One was a Scottish laborer, who suffered a brief concussion. He became dizzy when he leaned over and couldn't read the newspaper, but continued working.

POODLE UNHAPPY

The other was the case of a highly-skilled Englishman: "On doctor, I can't work," said the man. "I just can't concentrate. The figures blur before my eyes. My head feels moulty with pain."

Now is the time to own THE BOAT THE EXPERTS ARE BUYING

GREATEST DESIGN BREAKTHROUGH!

Bertram's revolutionary full-length V hull with longitudinal strakes is so far advanced over conventional hulls that the gap is like that between jet and piston planes! Only the Bertram hull gives you the speed of gliding boats and the seakindness of displacement hulls — plus totally new advantages never before available in either.

FOUR, SEVEN AND EIGHT. With no flat-bottomed surfaces, no chine, no keel, a Bertram rides so much more smoothly through seas, that experts taking their first ride are amazed. Longitudinal strakes act as spray strips, throw water out low and flat.

LOW MANEUVERABILITY. At low speeds, a Bertram turns instantly because chines are above water, not dug in. At high speeds, the Bertram V hull banks crisply inward, lifting her outside chine above water where it won't catch and trip. Passengers ride comfortably in perfect balance.

SMOOTHER WAVE, GREATER EFFICIENCY. Do you waste fuel dragging a big wake? The size of your wake shows hull efficiency. Compare the Bertram's flat wake — dramatic evidence that drag is substantially reduced. You achieve speeds never before possible for a seakindly hull.

1952 POLL. In a beam sea, a Bertram's V sections develop strong righting action. Longitudinal steps act as bilge keels. While drawing no more water than conventional boats, she sits proportionately deeper, thus is less disturbed by surface waves.

FINEST FIBERGLASS CONSTRUCTION

While costing no more than other quality boats of comparable size, Bertrams are molded of exclusive High-Impact fiberglass — finest in the industry. Incredibly strong, durable, resistant to damage. No seams, nothing to rot, swell, absorb water, gas, or oil. The Bertram gel (or surface) coat is flawlessly even, diamond smooth, imparting to its molded-in color a beauty heretofore unknown in fiberglass manufacture. With all formica and vinyl interiors, maintenance is reduced 80%.

Bertram's give you not only new versatility and greatly increased boating pleasure, but boating's most enduring value. Your pride in her appearance will be matched only by your joy in her performance.

Court Parade

Motorist Leaves Accident

Mervin Karst denied he had been in an accident Friday night but police found damage to his car and flakes of paint from another car.

Karst, 713 St. Patrick, pleaded guilty in central magistrate's court Saturday to failing to remain at the scene of an accident and was remanded to Friday for sentence.

Court was told Karst was intoxicated when police interviewed him. He admitted a conviction in April for impaired driving.

He had been involved in an accident in the 1100-block Oxford.

George Morgan had eight beers in the afternoon and eight more in the evening. Then he had an argument with three passengers in his truck.

Saanich police were called to Agnes and Gifford at 1:15 a.m. Saturday and arrested Morgan.

Morgan, 1468 Thurlow, pleaded guilty to impaired driving and was fined $300. His licence was suspended for four months.

A motorist who drove through a stop sign at Vancouver and Yates Friday night and struck a car pleaded guilty to impaired driving.

Delmar Gossell, 502 Richmond, was fined $300 and his licence was suspended for four months. He gave a breathalyzer reading of .19 per cent.

Dodgers Down, Others Up

Big Four Collapses

That big game gained Friday by Los Angeles in the frantic National League race was lost again Saturday.

The Dodgers blew a 3-2 lead as Pittsburgh won 9-3 at Los Angeles, their first setback in nine games. And in San Francisco, the Mets blew a 4-3 lead with one out to go and the Giants won 6-4 in 10 innings.

LITTLE RELIEF

Feature of the Pirates victory was the collapse of the big four Dodger relief pitchers — Bob Miller, Ron Perrenowski and starter Joe Moeller. The key blow was Donn Clendenon's three-run homer in the seventh.

Two Al Lannan homers gave the Mets their 4-3 lead, until pinch-hitter Jim Ray Hart tied it with a two-out homer in the bottom of the ninth. In the 10th, Willie McCovey's third home run of the day scored Willie Mays to end it all.

MARICHAL SAVED

Until Hart showed up, Juan Marichal seemed sure of his first loss to the Mets after 17 victories.

Today, the Dodgers will start Don Drysdale and the Giants Gaylord Perry as Philadelphia opens in Los Angeles and Pittsburgh moves to Fresno.

The Phillies just about fell out of it Saturday with an 11-2 drubbing by Houston. In Chicago, St. Louis made it seven straight with a 6-5 squeaker over the Cubs.

TRIPLE PLAY

Adair's fourth-inning homer provided all the Chicago runs in the 3-1 game, and he was also the central figure in a ninth-inning triple play that ended a Baltimore rally. Frank Robinson hit his 45th homer for Baltimore.

The Yankees fell into a tie for last place as Minnesota won 4-2, giving Jim Kaat a 24-10 record and tying him with Sandy Koufax in the victory race.

By JIM TANG

Maurice Milne lost his apprentice rating on the finest day of his racing career Saturday and Victoria owner George Harknett had himself a great afternoon as the 1966 thoroughbred racing season opened on a drizzly Saturday at Sandown Park.

The hard-riding Milne won five races, including the featured Colonist Handicap, on Harknett's Devonshire Cream. All were hustling riding jobs as the Scottish-born jockey showed no fear of a racing strip which was officially listed as fast for the start and went from there through good to muddy and finally to sloppy.

PERMANO SCRATCHED

Perhaps his best effort came in the popular featured-race win. With the field down from 10 runners to six following two early and two track scratches, which included Permano, the pre-race choice, Princess Vega tried to steal the purse.

Apprentice Ron Arnold drove the favorite to the front with Devonshire Cream in close attendance.

Princess Vega lengthened out a bit just before going into the backstretch, but Milne shook up his mount, made a move on the turn and won out in the last strides of a great stretch run.

JUST ENOUGH

The margin was barely a head, just enough to let the fans know the popular Victoria-bred had won the affair.

Before he got the big one, Milne started off by riding the first three winners.

He hustled the muddling Lovely Story to the front early and kept her there, kept Commander Joe on the pace in the second to take it in the stretch run, and made a well-timed move to take the lead on the top turn with Swan Lady to win the third rather handily by three lengths.

GOOD EFFORT

Milne sat out the fourth and sixth races between a good effort on outsider Victory Princess before he copped the feature.

That ride on Devonshire Cream cost him his apprentice's rating but it made little difference.

In his first ride as a full-blooded jockey, Milne just breezed home by six lengths with Wallaroo, laying behind the pace-setting Pascanna for five furlongs and then driving to the front in another perfectly-timed move.

FOUR PLACES

Wallaroo was the only favorite to score as fans spread their wagers on the hard-to-pick fields but four mutual choices managed to show up in time for place money.

Longest piece of the day was the $18 paid by Lovely Story but the biggest surprise was the $16 paid by Eastern Jewel, who led all the way in the fifth race.

BREAKAGE

The weather discouraged even the fans who swayed down from last year's opening $147.15 to $117.52 as many left early. It was reported that Victoria-owned Ardoin, who had a real shot at the second race and finished last, bid ... best of the special pools was the smash hit Exacto of $36.10, but it was a pleasant surprise to holders of the 7-1 combination when third-choice Yankee Mac, only 5-2, and favored Hula Fire came down in that order ... the top two races had the best finishes. Who's Hays just getting a nose decision over favored Jolly Pop in the Invitational Handicap which was the sixth race. Jockey Rogelio Trejos, up on Jolly Pop, lodged an objection after the two front-runners appeared to bump in the stretch but it was disallowed.

VIEWSPORT By Red Smith

Mention was made here the other day about the class shown by the Pittsburgh Pirates when they voted a full share of their world series money to the widow of Pittsburgh newspaperman Jack Hiron, who died of cancer this summer after 25 years of travelling with the team and covering its games.

They didn't know, of course, how much of their own money they might be giving away, because first they must get into the series and after that the size of individual shares will depend on the scores of the games and the size of the crowds. This shouldn't be.

There ought to be a fixed figure for each player on the winning team and another for each loser and the sums should be the same from year to year and park to park. Moreover, the difference between the winner's end and the loser's should be greater than it is.

There is no reason why this should not be established and there has been no reason for years. Not since television came along to guarantee a substantial base income.

The players' pool varies according to receipts from the first four games. The players get no part of the swing after the fourth game because it would be wicked to tempt them to prolong the entertainment unnecessarily through unworthy motives. Naturally, four games played in Cincinnati and Kansas City are going to produce less than four in Cleveland and Los Angeles, because of the bigger parks.

Rich Divine Right

When they're playing for the championship of the same world, it is wrong for a member of the Athletics to get less for winning—or for losing—than a member of the Indians. And he shouldn't get more for beating the Dodgers than for beating the Reds.

When game receipts were the only source of world series revenue—except for hot dogs and beer, scorecards, souvenir bats, seat cushions and parking, all of which belongs to the home club by divine right—players accepted these inequities as they accept the fact that an employer whose club draws small crowds can't pay the same salaries as a richer guy.

However, television now brings in enough to underwrite flat guarantees for every winning and losing player. There ought to be new rules written specifying who gets how much—the regulars, the coaches, the recent arrivals, the trainer, clubhouse attendant, and batboy.

Then there would be no cheap-John incidents like the one in 1932 when Mark Koenig, the shortstop who joined the Cubs late and won the pennant for them almost single-handed, was cut in for only a fraction of the share.

Also, there should be a greater disparity than there is between awards for winners and losers. If the world championship is the biggest prize in the game, it ought to be clearly marked as such. Each winning player should collect at least twice as much as each loser.

More for Owners

In 1963 each Dodger got $12,794 for beating the Yankees four straight and each Yankee collected $7,874.32. Using those figures as a guide, it could be obtained that from now on each member of the winning team would get $14,000, each loser $7,000.

These figures could be revised upward if changing times and increasing revenues dictated, if there happened to be a few more dollars left over for the owners one year than in another. It would do no harm.

Sometimes owners get stuck with a four-game series which leaves them little or no profit. Yet to their credit—and opportunities to say something to their credit are few—there probably isn't one of them who wouldn't rejoice to win in four games instead of a profitable seven.

Widening the spread between the winner's reward and the loser's isn't a matter of adding incentive. Pride is the spur, not money. Old Boss Radbourne and his Providence playmates of 1884 probably played as hard to whip the New York Mets for $100 as the Dodgers of 1963 did for $12,794.

The point is that, when the climax of summer-long competition is reached, the difference between winning and losing should be plainly marked. In the stakes race, the winner gets about 65 per cent of the purse and the second horse 20 per cent. That's the way it ought to be. In poker the winner gets it all.

Steelers Run Out of Steam

By ROBIN JEFFREY

Saturday was a nice day for ducks, farmers and rubber-boot salesmen. For football players, it was nasty, and for football promoters, it was annoying.

But despite Victoria's first steady rain for months, Victoria Steelers drew 2,121 spectators to Macdonald Park for their first home game in the Pacific Football League.

LEAGUE FAVORITES

Seattle Ramblers, the favorites in the six-team league, spoiled the debut by beating the not-quite-fit B.C. Lions — by a 20-0 score.

But Victoria was in the game and only one touchdown behind until the fourth quarter.

"We ran out of steam in the fourth quarter," quarterback and coach Pete Olier said.

"I've been out of football since 1964, and some of the other boys have been out for nearly as long."

BEAMER LEADER

The contingent of former Lions, headed by fullback Nub Beamer, kept the game interesting and the score respectable.

Beamer particularly pleased the fans. Only twice was he stopped for no gain on line plunges, and in the third quarter, he took a handoff from substitute quarterback Jack Patrick and charged for 15 yards on a draw play.

But it was tough trying to stop the reader. Beamer's second time they got the ball in the first quarter. Jay Morgan returned a Steeler punt 40 yards for a touchdown, but the Ramblers were charged with clipping, and the ball was brought back to the 50-yard line.

Four plays later Seattle had a legal touchdown. It was a 12-yard pass play to end Dan Mann.

Fullback Kermit Jorgenson went for 18 yards through left tackle and got three more over the right side. Then quarterback Dick Berg hit Mann on a 15-yard pass, and the elusive end spun over the goal line.

George Fleming, formerly of the Winnipeg Blue Bombers, converted.

And that's the way the score stood until the fourth quarter.

Seattle's never penetrated inside the Ramblers' 20-yard line, and were fortunate Ramblers made and lost three first-half fumbles.

Victoria's deepest penetration came in the third quarter when Olier hit Jerry Jones on a 30-yard pass that brought Steelers to the Seattle 28.

And on fourth down and five yards to go, Olier completed a pass to Billy Taylor at the Seattle three-yard line. But a penalty to Victoria for a face-mask infraction on the play put the ball back to the Seattle 38.

Olier was rattled for big losses on two occasions, but his protection was still thin at times.

COACHING ONLY

"I'm not playing as well as I should," he said. "But it will take me another couple of games to get back into it. If I don't improve, I may stick solely to coaching."

Ramblers took advantage of the steel Steelers in the fourth quarter. Jorgenson looked as if he was caught on a swing around left end from the nine-yard line, but slipped through three Victoria defenders for a touchdown. Fleming converted at about four minutes.

LOW ATTEMPT

At nine minutes, Seattle recovered a Victoria fumble on the Steeler 34-yard line, and halfback Larry Hill carried three successive times before going 15 yards around left end for the touchdown. Fleming's conversion attempt was low.

Jorgenson led Seattle with 124 yards on 24 carries, while Beamer picked up 60.5 yards on 14 tries for the Steelers.

LOOKED SILLY

Seattle coach Mel McQuinn was impressed by the Steelers.

"They gave us a good ball game," McQuinn said. "They made us look silly with those fumbles, and that number 64 (Clem Goulet) is hell on wheels."

McQuinn said the other clubs in the league draw about 3,000-5,000 fans. "This was a good crowd considering the rain and the fact they had to sit out."

PORTLAND NEXT

Now the Steelers have shown they can draw and play football, will the Vancouver comings go to Portland for next Saturday's game?

"I don't know," Olier said. "They were just off the boat today and we made up the plays as we went along."

It's a long bus trip to Portland. If the ex-Lions make it, they'll have a little time to talk tactics. Then, Portland, look out.

CROSSED LINE

The final Canadian try came five minutes from full time when Ryan picked up a kick ahead and crossed the line.

The Lions finished their six-month exhibition tour with a record of 23 wins, nine losses and three draws.

They lost 8-3 last week in an exhibition match at Vancouver against the B.C. all-stars.

Channel Flop

DOVER, England (AP)—Mary Margaret Revell, 25, formerly of Detroit, failed a fifth time Saturday to swim the English Channel. She suffered a cramp after making only four miles.

Two Vancouver Georgians invaded Victoria Saturday to win two exhibition rugby matches against Oak Bay Wanderers at Windsor Park.

Don Inglefield, Barry Stubbs, Geoff Stancombe and Mike Clarke were the first-division Vancouver scorers while Gary Johnson, Tom Walton and Don Burgess replied for Wanderers.

Jamie Martin and Dave Larch scored for the other Georgian squad.

Yankee Quits At 31

NEW YORK (AP)—Bobby Richardson, New York Yankee second baseman, officially announced his retirement from baseball Saturday and was honored with a day at Yankee Stadium before his team's game with the Minnesota Twins.

Richardson and his wife, Betty, and their two sons and two daughters were presented with almost 60 gifts in the form of merchandise and vacation trips, including a 1966 station wagon. Bobby also was handed thousands of dollars worth of cheques for his favorite charities.

Richardson, 31, has decided to hang up his spikes because he wants to devote more time to his family and his youth guidance work as a leader in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

Cotton Signs For November

SEATTLE (AP)—Eddie Cotton, light-heavyweight who lost a close decision to champion Jose Torres last month, has signed to fight Roger Rouse of Anacosta, Mont. The 12-round bout will be staged in the Seattle Coliseum Nov. 3.

John Huzinga's four goals paced Navy to a 7-5 victory over Victoria Luckies Saturday in the first round of the Victoria and District Soccer League's McGavin Cup playdowns.

Navy jumped into an early 2-0 lead but Luckies fought back to go ahead 4-3 at the half.

The field conditions forced the game up the middle and most of the goals came from Huzinga, at inside-left, and Cedric Robb of Luckies, who scored three from his centre-forward position.

Garry Sutherland scored two goals to help Navy to the win.

TWO MORE HELPED

McGavin Cup action continues today with four games.

The London Boxing Club meets Victoria West II at Topaz, University of Victoria II plays Falcons at the Gordon Head Campus, Hotspur tangle with Gorge Molsons at Bullen and West II play Kickers at Heywood Avenue.

All games start at 2 p.m.

Scores: Navy, John Huzinga 4, Garry Sutherland 2, Doug Butler, Cedric Robb 3, Trevor Walker, Barry Olier.

Right-winger Dave Hutton gave the Firemen a 1-0 lead at the 30-minute mark on a pass from rookie forward Bob Fulton.

It was still 1-0 at half time.

Veteran inside forward Normie McLeod tied the score at 36 minutes of the second half when a free kick by centre halfback Brian Hemmings got past a maze of Firefighters defenders.

When It Comes to Stadiums

Mets 1, Yankees 0

NEW YORK (CP) — The amazing New York Mets, firmly anchored in last place during their first four years in the National League as one of major league baseball's expansion teams, have climbed out of the cellar this year.

But contrary to some predictions, their rise to mediocrity on the field has not been matched by a decline in fan support.

The day after Labor Day, the Mets' paid attendance for 1966 stood at 1,800,170, the highest ever achieved by a National League team in New York, more than even saw the

Rejuvenation Starts Tomorrow

Empress Modernisation Won't Destroy Charms

By JIM BRAHAN

Operation Tea Cup starts brewing Monday when the first stage of a four-year rejuvenation program for the Empress Hotel gets underway.

Project manager Alan Tremaine says the first step will be construction of a new mechanical centre for the hotel, which was built in 1904.

The new electrical and heating centre will be built on the hotel's old bake house location, and will cost about $250,000.

ARRIVING SOON

"The new equipment has been ordered and is expected to arrive within a few weeks," Mr. Tremaine said.

The total cost of the program will be approximately $4,000,000.

The plan is to create 15 executive suites, five luxury suites, studio and family suites as well as a regal suite for visiting dignitaries, the project manager said.

"We intend to cater to a general cross section of the public."

"We are definitely not modernizing the traditional Empress charm, but only the facilities such as installing baths and showers, TV and radios in each room."

"The furnishings will be re-finished. The signs throughout the building will be replaced by signs of uniform design."

COFFEE SHOP

"The coffee shop will be completely modernized, but will still retain the general atmosphere of the Empress," Mr. Tremaine said.

One of the major points in the program is that the electrical system will be renewed.

The outside of the building will remain the same, but the parking area will be enlarged.

"The new car park will not be just another piece of concrete jungle, but will be landscaped to complement the hotel gardens."

"Public rooms will be brought up to standard of modern convention rooms with public speaking systems and acoustics taken into consideration," he said.

Scientist to Scientists: Let's Dispel Confusion

CHICAGO (UPI) — A prominent astronomer has criticized the American scientific establishment for failing to investigate persistent reports of unidentified flying objects despite the fact that sightings of many "flying saucers" remain unexplained.

Dr. J. Allen Hynek, chairman of Northwestern University's department of astronomy and a consultant to the air force on UFOs, said that science has taken no notice of the "persistent and disturbing phenomenon" of unidentified flying objects.

In a letter to science magazine, Hynek called for a scientific investigation to dispel "20 years of confusion."

Hynek accused scientists of flying away from study of UFOs in fear of "injuring their professional standing."

He said 20th-century science suffers from a kind of "provincialism." The attitude of science toward UFOs today parallels the attitude of men toward matriarchies 150 years ago, when science joked about "stories that fell from the sky," he said.

"There is a tendency to forget there will be a 21st century science and a 30th-century science," Hynek said.

Hynek said that reports of UFOs have reached new heights in the past two years, and that public interest and mystification is greater than ever.

Hynek said it was a fallacy to assume that all UFO reports were the work of "hysterics or crackpots or crazies."

Most reports come from stable and well-educated people, he said, and only a small number from "true believers" — the cultists for whom "flying saucers" are a kind of spiritual phenomena.

CLOSE RANGE
Some of the most startling reports of UFOs have come from trained scientists, Hynek said, and many UFOs have been seen clearly at close range.

Hynek, the country's recognized leading authority on UFOs, has studied hundreds of reports of unusual flying objects. Many have been misidentifications of natural events, he said.

But from many reports of "strong credibility," Hynek has concluded that there is "something going on." Air force studies have shown that UFOs do not appear to be a threat to national security, but Hynek has found consistent patterns in many reports.

Doctors Lose Privileges

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP) — Hospital privileges of two of this town's seven doctors were suspended Saturday by directors of the Cariboo Memorial Hospital.

The two were among four doctors who had been involved in a battle with the administrator and the board of directors a month ago.

A spokesman for the hospital board said Dr. A. H. Kutsch and Dr. N. G. Dormaar were suspended because they had refused to go along with a proposal by a special committee for a three-month trial period during which attempts would be made to "re-establish lines of communication."

OTHERS AGREE

Two other doctors agreed to the proposal.

Earlier this month the four doctors resigned when the hospital board refused to fire administrator Harold Wiseman. The doctors had charged the administrator with having too much power over doctors' hospital privileges.

The four then agreed to withdraw their resignations temporarily pending the report of the special committee, composed of representatives of the B.C. Medical Association, the B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons, the B.C. Hospital Association and the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service.

The report was read Wednesday night at a special meeting of the hospital society. Some members of the society later charged the hospital board with setting up the meeting merely to rubber-stamp the board's decisions.

The hospital board announced Saturday that the decision to suspend the privileges of Dr. Kutsch and Dr. Dormaar was made following a special five-hour meeting of the board of directors.

Out of Nowhere ...

LOS ANGELES (AP)—When Melvin Falconer, 40, pulled his pickup truck into his driveway Friday, he heard a groan from the back.

There, his head bloody, sat 16-year-old Richard Pratt. Neither could figure out how Pratt got there.

Police had a good idea. Someone reported seeing a collision between a motorcycle and a truck. But the motorcyclist disappeared and the truck drove away.

Police theorized that in the collision, Pratt was catapulted from his motorcycle over the truck's cab. He suffered a possible skull fracture.

Metchosin Singers Go Up in World

After six years in the basement, the Metchosin Community Choir will be harmonizing on the ground floor this winter.

This year, once more, the choir will be under the direction of Derek MacDermot, and will be seeking to add at least 10 to its membership, principally tenors and basses.

The choir was born six years ago, and to start with there were only about half a dozen singers. They were easily accommodated in the basement of the MacDermot home on Metchosin Road.

Membership has grown each year, until last year the basement nearly burst its seams with 30 singers meeting each week.

One of the early members was Mrs. Eleanor Whitney Griffiths, who had previously belonged to Mount View high school choir and the Gorge Presbyterian Church choir. "I think Derek MacDermot is one of the most patient and understanding directors I have ever met," she said Saturday.

The group has tackled all kinds of music, from light opera and musical scores to serious choral works. Christmas is a busy season, as the choir goes carol-singing around the Metchosin area, and presents Christmas music in the church.

The last two years, there has been a joint concert with the Spanish Peninsula Orchestra, which is also led by Mr. MacDermot.

"We go there to sing," said another member, Mrs. Edgard Carlsfeldt, "but there is a bonus. I was now in the district and made new friends through the choir."

"There is no audition, and new people don't have to be able to read music. Our first meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 4," he added.

For the first years the choir was helped by the Metchosin Recreation Commission, but this year the choir will move to the Metchosin elementary school on the corner of Happy Valley and Metchosin Roads. It will operate under the night school program of Sooke School Board.

"This year," said Mr. MacDermot, "we plan to enlarge our scope, and to take in people from Langford and Oakwood as well as the immediate area."

"We need tenors and basses in particular, and want to get at least 10 new members. Our aim is to learn with enjoyment."

"There is no audition, and new people don't have to be able to read music. Our first meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 4," he added.

Mine's Pay Missed

Some 100 men are out of work in the Sooke area as a result of the closing Friday of Cowichan Copper Company's mine at Jordan River. Paycheques due on the 15th for office staff and shiftbosses were not handed out.

One of the workers who should have been paid Thursday said Saturday that he was sure he would get his money as soon as everything was straightened out at the mine.

DUE SOON

Most of the workers are due to be paid on Sept. 23. Sooke Chamber of Commerce president John Slenko said Saturday the chamber had held a special meeting to discuss the situation.

"According to Cowichan president Ossie McDonald, the mine will open again next week," said Mr. Slenko, "but this is the second time the mine has been closed in three years."

SERIOUS BLOW

"The chamber hopes the mine will reopen, but meanwhile the economy of the area is seriously affected. These men have not received the paycheques that were due on Friday and the mine forms one of our basic industries," said Mr. Slenko.

Occupants Help Fight Fire

Saanich fire department extinguished a basement fire in the home of William A. Johnson, 590 Royal Oak, at 6:30 p.m. Saturday.

A fire department official said the owners controlled the fire with buckets of water and a garden hose until department vehicles arrived and put out the blaze which was confined to the basement.

The blaze burned out the home telephone wires and the alarm had to be phoned from a neighboring house.

The amount of damage was not specified, but the fire department said it was mainly caused by smoke.

After Strike Delay

Term to Start At Claremont

The new school term begins this week for 570 students of Claremont senior high school, when they start classes two weeks later than most of their contemporaries in the Greater Victoria area.

Opening was delayed because the current carpenter-contractor dispute stalled work on the vocational and classroom additions. The projects still are not finished.

SHORT OF SPACE

The abundance of students and shortage of space has forced school authorities to hold registration for the students over three days.

Grade 13 will register Monday, Grade 12 Tuesday and Grade 11 Wednesday.

The shortage of classrooms has made the preparation of timetables difficult, and the project has kept Claremont's

Lapidarists' Project

Unique Map Being Built

By BERT BINNY

The Victoria Lapidary and Mineral Society is making a unique contribution to the 1966 and 1967 centenaries.

The project selected is the production of an intarsia map of Canada. It was adopted after a club competition.

The intarsia map will be made up of rocks native to each province, shaped to depict that province. Through correspondence with other rock clubs throughout Canada, and some provincial governments, rock from each region has been donated.

The stone has been cut into slabs by club members and allocated to individuals for cutting and final polishing.

The completed map is 28 by 36 inches, and it will be framed and put on permanent exhibition in the new B.C. Provincial Museum.

A background of deep blue represents the oceans to the east, west and far north. The portion of Alaska adjoining B.C. and the northern portion of the U.S. below the Canadian border are done in quartz.

The three northern territories will be of aqua wollastonite. The Yukon will be depicted in a rock of historical significance: gold quartz with pyrite.

Vancouver Island will show up brightly in fresh pink Rhodonite from Salt Spring Island, an area beloved by rockhounds and visitors alike. B.C. jade was the unanimous choice for a suitable material for the home province.

Alberta is shown in light periwinkle wood, while Saskatchewan and Manitoba will be completed in darker shades of petrified wood along with limestone with mauve inclusions. Ontario is made up with sodalite in mottled shades of light and dark blue.

Amazonsite from Lac Seul was provided for Quebec, contrasting with the Labradorite for Labrador and Newfoundland. This material required exceptional care in cutting. To take full advantage of the more colorful layers, it had to be cut at various angles.

Red granite from "New Brunswick and again from Nova Scotia complete the map.

The names of the various clubs donating materials accompany the map.

The Centennial project will serve as the focal point of interest at the Victoria Rock and Hobby Show, Sept. 22 to 24 at the Curling Club.

Not only does the map honor the two centenaries, but it also marks the 10th year of the Victoria Lapidary and Mineral Society.

Hostesses Sought By Expo

An interviewing team that will be crossing the country hiring bilingual hostesses for Montreal's Expo 67 starts its work in Victoria Monday.

There have been more than 2,000 applications from coast to coast, and 285 will be chosen from among them. Island applicants will be interviewed all day Monday at the Empress.

A hostess must be, among other things, attractive, a Canadian citizen aged between 20 and 35, bilingual in French and English, preferably single, with a good knowledge of Canada and its history.

Sooke School Board chairman John Bartanus pointed out that the federal offer to pay 75 per cent of the costs would expire next March. "I can't see the provincial government doing this job alone," he said. "Unless we hurry up with this, we just shall not get the promised vocational facilities."

Leslie Karagialis was elected chairman of the joint board at the meeting. Mrs. Nora Lindsay is vice-chairman, and F. J. Willway, secretary.

Cheffins Denies Report

Ronald Cheffins said Saturday he has no intention of running for public office.

The University of Victoria professor of political science and public law was mentioned as a possible Progressive Conservative candidate if a bye-election is called in an attempt to secure a seat for Attorney General Bonner, who was defeated in the Sept. 12 election.

Bert Nelson, president of the Victoria Progressive Conservative Association, was reported to have voiced the possibility.

"I have never discussed with Mr. Nelson any possibility of my being a candidate, and I don't intend to be a candidate for public office," Mr. Cheffins said Saturday.

Carpenter Dispute

Contractors Hoping For Vote Approval

Victoria contractors were hoping Saturday that the provincial labor department would soon authorize a vote among local carpenters on a settlement proposal made several weeks ago.

It was the only hopeful note in a situation which has stopped work on major building projects for more than six weeks.

George Wheaton, second vice-president of Victoria branch, Amalgamated Construction Association of B.C., recalled that local contractors took a "straw vote" among carpenters here and found they would generally accept the same terms which settled the dispute in the Okanagan.

With that data to support their application, they asked the labor department to allow a vote on a new proposal which offered carpenters a 40-hour week and an increase in wages from the current $3.49 to $3.70 until next April, when the rate would rise to $4 an hour.

(The carpenters want a 37½-hour work week.)

However, the labor department did not want the vote to be taken until industrial inquiry commissioner W. E. Philpott brought in recommendations for settlement of the dispute.

The carpenters, through their provincial bargaining body, have accepted the report, while the contractors' provincial organization doesn't like it. Mr. Philpott thinks carpenters should have a 37½-hour work week.

Mr. Wheaton said Saturday building industry only as a sideline to their other interests.

Mr. Wheaton said the list of the issues and was based on information that 200 independent contractors have settled on the basis of carpenters' demands.

He said the employers who had acceded to carpenters' demands did not represent a majority of the construction industry, and were a "rag-tag element" who were in the building industry only as a sideline to their other interests.

Mr. Wheaton said the list of the issues and was based on information that 200 independent contractors have settled on the basis of carpenters' demands.

He said he was convinced Victoria carpenters wanted to settle the dispute and return to work.

Meanwhile, at the provincial level, statements from both the contractors and carpenters conflicted, and it appeared Mr. Philpott's peace formula wouldn't work.

The contractors called it a "complete sellout" to the union.

Arnold Smith, president of the provincial carpenters' council, said the strike-lockout would end only when the employers accepted the recommendations of the commissioner.

Red Ensign Backers Renew Fight

All those who favor the Red Ensign, say "Aye."

One hundred members of the Red Ensign Club met Saturday night in Central Junior High School auditorium—and voted 3 to 1 in favor of switching back to the old flag.

"Pretty heavy discussion on both sides," admitted one delegate.

"We're going to put it to a vote in all our clubs across the country—then to the government in Ottawa—and have that flag law repealed."

Fishermen Find Last Body

The last of three victims of a boat-swamping off Sooke last month was found Saturday near the scene of the tragedy by three sports fishermen.

Sooke RCMP identified the body as Percy Kabel of Calgary.

G. F. Hansen and his brother A. R. Hansen, both of Sooke, were out in one boat and a third brother, Peter Hansen of 2875 Carlow Road, was in another when they spotted the body floating in the kelp on the west side of Secretary Island.

Suites Hard to Find

Especially for Native Canadians

By WILLIAM THOMAS

At last George Wilson has found a place to stay. The slight, soft-spoken University of Victoria student has settled into an apartment after making no many phone calls he has lost count.

Mr. Wilson is not a Negro. Neither is he from any one of a number of foreign countries that send students to this university. George Wilson is a Canadian—a native Canadian. This is his big disadvantage in looking for a place to stay.

Landlords seem to reject Indians out of hand, but even after his unhappy experiences Mr. Wilson takes this in his stride.

NO STRANGER The 28-year-old geography student is no stranger to Greater Victoria. He studied here for two years and enjoyed his stay.

Probably the reason Mr. Wilson had his first taste of the sick side of the city last week was that during his earlier stay here he was staying with Mrs. Rose Fisher, who now lives at 992 West George.

ONE OF FAMILY When George Wilson started university three years ago, Mrs. Fisher was his landlady and as she explained Saturday, "George lived with us but he was also one of us."

At that time Mrs. Fisher maintained her own home, but last week the best she could do was help George look for a suite.

Now Mrs. Fisher is more indignant and upset about the apparent prejudice than is the Indian student.

DISGUSTED "I am both disgusted and ashamed at all this. The situation is really dreadful," she said.

Mrs. Fisher explained her attempts at helping George Wilson. "At one place in Langford a woman opened the door and as soon as she saw George she said the suite was rented, and all the time her husband was saying, 'Show the boy in and let him see the suite.' While he was talking the woman was saying, 'It's rented,' and winking at her husband. I just felt sick."

SUDDENLY TAKEN Mr. Wilson said, "It seemed all too often that the suites were for rent when I phoned, but as soon as they saw me they were suddenly taken."

The search went on from early Friday until late Sunday. He added, "One man in James Bay just said he would not rent me the suite, and that was that."

WORKING FOR DEGREE George Wilson left high school and worked as a fisherman for four years. Later he came to Victoria for two years' study toward his B.E.

More recently he taught in Prince Rupert, and this summer went back to work in a fish-packing plant to help pay his way back to university.

Mr. Wilson hopes to complete his degree and then take post-graduate study, possibly for a career in social work or law.

Devonshire Cream, ridden by jockey Maurice Milne, was winner of the Colonist Handicap at Sandown on the opening day of the meet. Rain made a slow, muddy track which afforded several favorite upsets. The bride is the former Carolyn Suzette Smith, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. T. G. Smith, 750 Island Road. Groom's parents are Dr. and Mrs. J. F. Mercer, 2465 Chiltern Place. Pink and white gladioli were on the altar for the double-ring ceremony. Rev. Alec Calder performed the lovely September wedding.

Entering the church on the arm of her father, the bride was exquisite in an empire-line gown of white crepe that was gently gathered at the bustline and accented with a row of tiny white pearls and flowers. These matched the streamers trimming her miniature flowered cap which held a white tulle veil.

Their short-length gowns of floral chiffon were styled like the bride's, the matron of honor's and bridesmaid's being in blue, mauve and pink over pale mauve and the junior bridesmaid's being fashioned of pink over the same color. Accessories were in the pale mauve and bouquets, pink roses and white stephanotis, edged with mauve ribbons.

Derek Mercer was best man for his brother and ushering guests to pews marked with pink and white rosettes were another brother, Tim Mercer and Michael Gibbs.

Irish fashions well worth a second look . . .

Some interesting new arrivals at Madam and Eve come from Northern Ireland . . . bearing the Strelitz label (which doesn't sound very Irish to us, but no matter) . . . Sporty tailored suits in an all-wool fabric that looks like homespun . . . One is in the new grape color . . . has a collarless Chanel-type jacket with two pockets on either side . . . A similar suit in navy and red . . . Another smart Strelitz suit is a large check in camel and navy and burgundy . . . double breasted, with a city-country look . . . Slacks too by this maker . . . camel and navy windowpane check . . . knowingly cut, and minus waistband . . . There are camel wool shell tops to team up with these . . . and the addition of a navy turtleneck sweater makes a very smart outfit . . . Now that the railway strike is over, new things are arriving daily . . . By the time you read this the new clutch bags in soft kid should be on hand . . . These come in myriad colors . . . cinnamon, platinum, seaweed, teal blue, orange, peacock etc. . . and they all have gay printed linings in colors to tone . . . Some delightful new "smoke ring" scarves by Vera . . . chiffon or silk twill in lovely colors . . . these can work magic on a plain dress neckline! . . . If they have what you want, they'll hold it for you till Christmas . . . If they haven't they can order it now . . . and you've a good chance of getting it, if you act pronto! . . . This doesn't apply, though, to Home's beautiful 18th century mahogany dining room furniture . . . It's open stock and there's a good supply on hand right now, but no more shipments until next May . . . so if you're thinking of elegant new furniture in your dining room for the Yuletide festivities . . . visit Home now and select the pieces that will make this important room your pride and joy . . . Wonderful value, too! . . . We noticed a new shipment of those charming carved mahogany Victorian chairs in the Gallery . . . and there is just time to order your favorite material and color in case it isn't there now! . . . Home Furniture, 225 Fort St., 323-4124.

Huge drop-earrings—some almost shoulder-length—provide glamour to a stark after-five dress.

Lively new shoe styles by Joyce . . .

The big thing about this season's Joyce shoes . . . that immensely popular make of good, medium-priced footwear . . . is that they're all made on a brand new last . . . with the rounded toes and arching heels that spell such devastating chic this year . . . This applies to the season-in, season-out classic styles . . . as well as to the brand new 1966 designs . . . and you'll find every one of them at Munday's . . . in a complete range of sizes . . . Wonderful with suits is a new model called "O.U.Kid" . . . a little-heeled pump with the big buckle made popular by Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy . . . Dressy enough for anywhere is "French Fluff" . . . a soft suede pump with high, bow-decorated vamp . . . black, brown, burgundy, navy and wheat . . . "First Place" is a spectacular pump in suede and calf . . . driftwood, marble grey or black . . . Another smart new model is "Blazer Man" . . . a suede T-strap with cord trim . . . and "Playdown" is a versatile pump with low-covered heel, roll top . . . and not a seam in sight! . . . Many other styles too . . . and most come in colors like red, green, oter, cinnamon as well as black . . . Joyce shoes are priced at $15.95 and $16.95 . . . they're wonderfully comfortable and hard-wearing . . . and smarter than ever, at . . . Munday's, 1203 Douglas St., EV 3-2111.

An exciting collection of fall millinery . . .

There's no getting away from it . . . a woman is simply not properly put together unless she wears a hat on city streets . . . Just take a look around you next time you're downtown . . . and we think you'll agree that hatted ladies present a much smarter, more sophisticated appearance! . . . How about you? . . . Just because your budget may not run to a Dior is no excuse for not owning a becoming chapeau . . . not when Miss Frith's has such an exciting collection of hats in felt, velvet, straw, feathers, mouflon and assorted materials . . . many of which won't even put a dent in your budget! . . . We're simply amazed at what you can get in the $5.99-$7.99 price range! . . . what's more, you're not apt to meet yourself coming and going because many of Miss Frith's millinery lines are sold exclusively by them . . . and even identical models look completely different when carried out in a different color or material! . . . Speaking of colors, there's every shade in the spectrum and we don't imagine you'd have much trouble finding a hat to match or harmonize with your favorite outfit . . . We noticed several lovely hats in Tokay grape and antique gold . . . two shades that are emerging as fall's favorites . . . There are lots and lots of lovely hats for every face, mood and occasion . . . so, when you're hat-hunting go first to . . . Miss Frith Millinery and Fashions, 1617 Douglas St., 323-7181.

Ruffles on front and cuffs of a soft white blouse have always seemed to us the acme of femininity, when worn with a tailored suit.

It's a wise bride who registers at Eaton's . . .

The more we see and hear of weddings . . . the more impressed we are with the type of service being meted out by Eaton's Gift and Bridal Registry . . . and the time and effort it saves everybody concerned with planning for the Big Day . . . So our advice to every girl who hears wedding bells in the offing . . . is to tie her belt to the Bridal Consultant's attractive little salon located in the china dept. of Eaton's . . . and there talk over her plans, needs and tastes . . . (Mrs. Robertson's a real doll who's thoroughly conversant with everything pertaining to weddings . . . Even if it's only advice you're after, she'll dispense it charmingly!) . . . Eaton's can handle every aspect of your wedding . . . but if you prefer to do it yourself, you can still let them take care of things like providing the printed invitations, cards, serviettes, etc. . . all of which you can arrange for in one visit to the Gift Registry . . . One thing you should definitely register . . . indicate your taste in silver, china, crystal, linens . . . even furniture . . . Then let word get out among your family and friends . . . They'll bless you for your consideration . . . and you, in turn, will rejoice at getting gifts you really want . . . without duplication . . . (not like a friend of ours who received six carrying sets, but nary a tumbler!) . . . Eaton's Gift and Bridal Registry, 222-7141, Local 373.

Did you know that mink is one of the hardest, best-wearing furs extant—despite its delicate appearance?

The sweetest gifts on earth . . .

Every time we pass Welch's Candy Shop and see that bright, attractive window filled with delectable goodies, we have to wrestle with our conscience . . . which usually loses out so we say "to heck with the diet and let the calories fall where they may!" . . . Seriously though, candy lovers from near and far agree that Welch's are unsurpassed for making delicious chocolates and other candy confections . . . Over 50 varieties to choose from . . . you name it, they have it . . . all made freshly from the very finest ingredients . . . And whether you favor crisp, crunchy nuts and brittles, smooth, chewy caramels and nougats, or soft, melt-in-your-mouth creams, with their rich coating of chocolate . . . you can be sure they're all fresh and wholesome . . . When you're thinking of a gift for that hard-to-please person, you can't go wrong with a box of Welch's . . . whether it's to say "happy birthday," "bon voyage" or "thank you" . . . or just to give tasty pleasure for no special reason at all except because you want to . . . Welch's are just right . . . You don't even have to shop in person . . . just pick up the phone and give your order either for mailing, or for local delivery . . . Welch's Candy Shop, 755 Fort St., 323-6422.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: When will the public educators learn that their function is to EDUCATE. Period. Character building and social adjustment should be handled in the home. Parents know their children better than the teacher knows them — especially when there are 30 to 35 students in the class.

What gives these egg-heads the right to take over our children as substitutes for the children they never had?

Teachers tell our children about sex, Freud, politics and morals. Our children are confused enough without having two sets of authorities to guide them — one at home and one at school.

Please advise teachers to stick to their jobs — teaching and grading students, and to lay off the psychiatry and so-called "character" molding.

TIME FOR A CHANGE

Dear Time: You sound like a parent who is having trouble with her children — and I'm not surprised. The size of that chip on your shoulder indicates there must be some wood higher up. You are right when you say teachers have enough to do without doubling as wallowing walls, leaning posts and substitute parents — and the fact is they don't go looking for these added responsibilities. They inherit them by default, my friend.

Many children who can't communicate with their parents find a sympathetic ear at school. And thank heaven for it. Mother, you should be grateful.

Dear Ann Landers: I am male, under 30, with a three-year-old motherless son. My wife died last year. Her folks took the boy with the understanding that I would take him back when and if I remarried. Several months ago I became interested in a woman I will call Constance. I told her all about the boy and she said she would love to raise him. Two weeks ago we became engaged. Last night Constance told me she has decided she would never be comfortable with another woman's child. I love my son and want him with me. I also love this woman. Do you think I could be happy with her under these conditions?

California Honeymoon

Following a honeymoon trip to California, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Allan Campbell, married in St. Alban's Church, will make their new home in Nanaimo.

The bride is the former Donna Louise Haines, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William James Haines, 3221 Browning Street. The groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. H. F. McLean, 3048 Donald Street.

Arrangements of white chrysanthemums decorated the altar, and baskets of white gladioli decorated the church for the ceremony at which Rev. C. D. Blencoe officiated. A duet, "O Perfect Love," was sung by the Misses Jackie Court and Connie Pepper.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of sonoma. The empire bodice was of Chantilly lace, and was styled with tiny point sleeves. A detachable wattleau train extended back from the waist. Her tiered, scalloped veil of silk illusion misted from a coronet of seed pearls and crystals. She carried a bouquet of pink Rhapsody roses and stephanotis, with pink leaves.

Bands of lace appliques encircled the empire waistlines of the floor-length gowns of silk peau d'ange in melon tones worn by the bride's attendants. The same appliques highlighted the elbow-length sleeves. Back interest was created by wattleau trains. Headpieces were self-fabric rosettes and they carried bouquets of white gladioli and matching melon-colored net.

Miss Sheila Witter was maid of honor and bridesmaids, the Misses Barbara Court and Mary-Lou MacLean.

Sid Campbell was best man. Ushering guests were Eric Kent and Gerry Imbery.

A three-tier wedding cake made by the bride's mother centred the head table at the reception in St. Alban's Church Hall. J. E. Roberts proposed the toast to his niece.

For travelling on honeymoon, the new Mrs. Campbell chose a two-piece wool suit in jade green tones. She complemented her ensemble with a matching hat, a camel coat and brown accessories.

Bride Entertained At Shower Parties

Mrs. Allan A. Cooper, the former Margaret Janice-Leigh Gilhooly, was feted at a number of parties and showers prior to her marriage in Quadra Bible Chapel on Friday evening.

Mrs. Verna Gilhooly and Miss Susan Smith entertained at a shower party for the bride. Courages were presented to the guest of honor, her mother, Mrs. Emerson, the groom's mother, Mrs. W. Cooper and grandmother, Mrs. C. Elles.

Dan, Diana Enjoy School Journalism

By KITTE TURMELL

Dan's no athletic hero, and Diana admits she'll never be a prom queen. Yet, their work for their class will endure long after the last cheer has died and the first corsage has withered away.

They're putting out the school yearbook.

They've also found in school journalism a chance to express their own ideas, to meet interesting new people and to train for a career.

So sharpen your pencils and note down these ideas from an expert, J. F. Paschal. He's executive director of the Future Journalists of America, with headquarters at the University of Oklahoma.

Paschal listed these five guidelines for yearbook planning:

Treat it as a memory book. "It should be something you'd choose to take, along with the Bible and an almanac, if shipwrecked with only five books on a desert island! That means it should be a good reference book, not just a random scrapbook. It should be history, but not dull."

Stress the picture pages. "Insist on photography with good tonal quality. Faces neither too light nor too grey. Try to get the essence of a group, an event, a sport. In composition, don't waste space. Example: a big group picture may sometimes be cropped at the waists of the subjects. Then it doesn't show helmets that look outdated next year."

Season it with controversy. "Make room for sound-bites about what you, the Explosive Generation, think about controversial subjects — teen-age marriage, nuclear warfare and certain school problems. But be responsible about it."

Be accurate and complete. "A picture may be worth a thousand words, but it still has to have an accurate caption. Provide an index of subjects and all names. Record every game or meet in sports, even in the losing seasons. Name what the choir sang and the band played."

As we concluded I asked about the trends in high school journalism.

"Production techniques are changing — to offset, for instance. But more important is the trend in subject matter. School p.a. systems now break most of the important spot news. So a good school paper turns to lively features and in-depth reporting, as does any outstanding newspaper!"

Ability to spell is essential to a journalist and an asset in most occupations. For Kite Turmell's free leaflet, "Learn To Spell," send a self-addressed, stamped envelope with our request, care of this newspaper. This practical, helpful leaflet includes pointers on how to improve your spelling, and avoid boners and shun the "demon words" many misspell.

Kitte Turmell Letters

Dress Should Suit Build

"Dear Kite Turmell: I have a problem with my figure, and was wondering if you could give me any ideas. I would like to find some exercises which really work, for reducing my bust-line. I am 16 and my bust is a lot larger than I would like it to be."

"Many of my clothes are quite unbecoming on me, and I'm very self-conscious about it. I have gone on diets, and exercised daily, but nothing seems to help. I lose weight everywhere, except around my bust-line. I would feel more at ease around others, if I could overcome this. Have you any suggestions for a reader?"

Dear Reader: First shop for a "bra" that becomes your figure; when you buy clothes look for those designed to suit your figure, so you can look and feel your best.

I checked with Evelyn Lowendahl, an international authority on physical education, and here are her suggestions:

"Exercise that takes off excess fat is helpful. Overhead lifts are recommended for stretch-ups. The easy way is to lift hands overhead, with fingers stretched to the ceiling, as high as you can go, straight up. Do this until you feel a pull in the waist. Repeat 10 times, each morning and night. Later stretch this to 20 times, each morning and night."

"Q. Can you give us some statistics on teen-marriages and break-ups for a club forum? — Tim."

A. Statistics show that 40 per cent of all brides in the U.S. are between the ages of 15 and 18, and that half these marriages break up within five years.

Confidential to "Jealous" — Don't make this an infernal triangle. Agree that both are free to date others; bite time and let him do the choosing. By then, you might prefer another "steady."

Dear Kite Turmell: My favorite dress-up dress is white. I want to wear it to a wedding, but hear that only a bride should wear white. What do you suggest? — Lynn."

Dear Lynn: Wear the white dress with colored accessories — shoes, gloves, hat or veil, etc., in matching colors will add interest. You may also add color by wearing flowers or jewelry.

"Dear Kite: Can you suggest some outspoken books on sex, for teenagers, young adults, and their parents to review and discuss for our club forum? — Mary."

Dear Mary: Teen-Agers And Sex, by James A. Pike, of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese, is published by Prentice Hall. Questions discussed include: Should a couple marry, because the girl gets pregnant before marriage? Bishop Pike said questions to consider and answer honestly are: "After sober reflection, could a sound marriage be anticipated?" "Do the man and woman love each other and were they planning to marry?" If the two are not in love, and the marriage has poor chances, then, Bishop Pike cautioned "a shot-gun wedding" may be the borrowing of further grief.

The Week in Records

Square Sound Affected Beach Boys

One of the chief complaints with the Beach Boys' concert last Aug. 17 was the disastrous sound system.

Chad and Jeremy, who were also on the same bill, claim that the sound systems at all their concerts on their recently completed tour, were terrible. Their criticism doesn't end there, however.

They called their tour an "ill-prepared jumbled package with uninspired posters and uncoordinated promotion". That type of comment sounds familiar.

Napoleon XIV has neither confirmed nor denied the rumor that he is an executive of Warner Bros.

Michele has left the Mema's and the Papa's. She will be replaced by Jim Gibson.

Bob Dylan has been receiving a certain amount of criticism for his practice of switching to electric guitars and a band for accompaniment in the second half of his concerts.

In some of Dylan's British performances the criticism has been more severe. In several cases part of the audience has left at the start of the second half.

Hit singles: 96 Tears by ? and the Mysterians is number one.

Hit LPs: New albums available in Victoria are Wild Thing by the Troggs, 5D by the Byrds and Blonde on Blonde by Bob Dylan.

Up 'n' comers: Fortune Teller by the Rolling Stones, If I were a Carpenter by Bobby Darin. A song which is getting a lot of call back east is Nowadays Clancy Can't even Sing by Buffalo Springfield — it seems it has something to do with LSD.

Frank advice — from the mother of an 18-year-old girl, from the feminine view. Theme: "Don't be snored."

Tonight Is Too Late, by Thomas C. Partell, gives facts about teen-age sex attitudes and practices, V.D., drugs, drinking, etc.

Q. "What's the proper way to eat onion rings?" — Bud.
A. With fork, not fingers.

Q. "What does the teen expression 'buff' mean?" — Sue.
A. Pretty, handsome, excellent, fun, etc. It's an adjective used many ways, for whatever raises a compliment.

Marriage Bliss Missing Girls in U.S.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—The United States is caught in the middle of a marriage squeeze.

It looks as if 500,000 or more young girls are going to have to postpone their first marriage, or get hooked to somebody they would have passed up in normal times, or — worst of fates — not get married at all.

The cause is the baby boom that followed the Second World War. The babies are grown up now and the girls are looking for husbands.

HITCHED YOUNGER
The trouble is that girls get hitched younger than guys — ages 18 to 22 for females versus 20 to 24 for males. And most of the guys who were born dur-

Bogus $10 Bills On Their Way

MONTREAL (CP) — Police officials have issued a warning that a new series of counterfeit $10 bills may be circulating in Canada.

The RCMP and Montreal city police say the bills have already appeared in Montreal and may have a nationwide circulation.

Sub Launched For Canada

CHATHAM, England (UPI)—The Oberon-class submarine "Okanagan" was launched at Chatham dockyard for the Royal Canadian Navy. It was the third sub of its class to be launched at Chatham for Canada and will be ready for service in about a year. The sub was launched by Mrs. Leo Cadieux, wife of Canada's associate minister of national defence.

Charges Slated For Monday

MONTREAL (CP) — Serge Demers, 21, testified here that he and a 17-year-old youth were chosen by a terrorist group to plant a time bomb that exploded in a Montreal shoe factory and killed a woman last May 5.

Demers was testifying at a coroner's inquest that found him, the juvenile and six other young men criminally responsible for the woman's death.

The victim, Mrs. Therese Morin, 64, was killed when the home-made dynamite bomb went off in the east-end office of La Grenade shoe factory where she worked.

NAMED IN VERDICT
Named in the verdict were Richard Bouchoux, 27, Demers, Charles Gagnon, 26, Pierre Valliere, 27, Gerard Laquerre, 22, Reel Mathieu, 19, Marcel Faulkner, 21, and the juvenile.

Charges were expected to be laid Monday. No criminal charges are laid in Quebec in cases of violent death until criminal responsibility has been determined by a coroner's jury.

STUDENT KILLED
Mrs. Morin's death was one of two which police have said are connected with terrorist activity.

In a second explosion, a 16-year-old student, Jean Corbo, of suburban Mount Royal was killed near a Montreal plant of the Dominion Textile Co. by a bomb which police said apparently went off prematurely.

Two of those named in Friday's verdict, Gagnon and Valliere, are still in charge and being sought by police.

COURT PROTECTION
Demers testified under protection of the court. His testimony cannot be used against him in any subsequent legal proceedings.

Demers said the reason for the bombing was that "the strike there had dragged on for more than a year."

He testified that the juvenile delivered the package containing the bomb, and that after delivery, the two went to a nearby telephone booth and called the company, saying that a bomb had been planted on the premises.

HAVE SUCCESS
The young men have been successfully warding off any pressure from the mounting numbers of marriageable young women.

If the pattern continues, the sociologists said, more than a half-million women will have to postpone getting married.

But the young bachelors had better enjoy it while they can. In the 1970s, the ratio will return to 99 guys to 100 gals.

Old Building Downed In Halifax

HALIFAX (CP) — A tavern that housed the bawdiest theatre and before that a church has come down under the wrecker's hammer in another phase of Halifax's downtown redevelopment program.

The Oasis Tavern on Barrington Street was in a building that housed Chalmers Presbyterian Church from 1849 to 1905.

When the congregation moved, it became a centre for live theatre, then a movie house. After a fire in December, 1937, it was rebuilt and continued to show films until 1957 when the building was converted into a tavern.

Beer Parlor Gives Fine Return

VANCOUVER (CP)—A non-drinking, non-smoking old-age pensioner chose the beer parlor beat to collect for the Association for Retarded Children—and she loved it.

Clara McGillip chose the tavern "because they didn't tell me where to go."

"I figured that if the Salvation Army can go into these places I could do the same thing for the retarded children."

"I'm not a drinker or a smoker but they treated me like a queen."

Mrs. McGillip canvassed almost every beer parlor in town, averaging $4 in silver per pub. She did her collecting in the afternoon. "It's a little scary at night."

Families Win Master Award

Alberta

The Elmer Jensen family, mother, father, two sons and two pretty daughters, of Standard, and the Lionel Bird family of Carstairs-Cremona, with three children, have won the 1966 Master Farm Family awards for southern and west-central Alberta respectively.

The Jensen spread is 2,200 acres and the Birds farm eight quarter sections.

The annual award is for efficiency of operation and the part played in community affairs.

The Canadian government will continue to prohibit commercial development in its national parks because Canada has enough natural resources without touching the reserved lands.

A Banff audience was told by the minister of northern affairs, Arthur Laing.

Alberta government employees will get a longer leave of absence for education purposes. The cabinet approved 12 months for professional and technical training for provincial employees. Six months was the old limit.

The Blackfoot Indian band at Gleichen will donate land and a building if a new general hospital is built there.

The promise came as Gleichen and nearby Strathmore made opposing bids to be selected as the new site.

George Repka has announced he will seek a fifth consecutive term as mayor in the Oct. 19 civic elections at Grand Prairie.

Women Drivers Not So Bad
YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP)—U.S. Representative Michael Kirwan says, "Thank God for women drivers." The 80-year-old Ohio Democrat said he ran out of gas here Friday and several male drivers passed him by as he stood near his car. Finally a woman driver stopped and drove him to the nearest service station.

The surf of $49,000 for bursary payment to Technical Institute students at Edmonton has been approved by the Alberta cabinet. The bursaries are $100 monthly for 50 students in first year and a maximum of $20 in second year.

Alberta raced to complete swathing this week, delayed by wet weather in the earlier part of September. With the prospect of frost only days away, the pace must be maintained. Only in the Medicine Hat area is the harvest completed.

The "long-haired bums" have invaded Banff and city council is debating on methods to ensure their removal. They cluster up shop entrances, sit on stairs in public buildings, make insulting remarks to passers-by and try to invade teen-age social gatherings. Where do they come from? Nobody seems to know. Banff authorities call them vagabonds and they have no visible means of support.

The new chief of police in Edmonton is the former Assistant Commissioner Lloyd Bingham, RCMP director of criminal investigation at Ottawa. He took the civic authorities five-and-a-half months to select the new chief. Chief Bingham has been with the federal force since 1934.

The site is near Deval, a village 60 miles north of Regina, and early electrical apparatus, gramophones and firearms are now an important part of the collection.

In the old days, it was necessary for a Mountie to know about horses. They, the boy and his own feet were his chief means of transportation as he patrolled thousands of square miles of wilderness in the name of the British Crown.

But today the auto, airplane, motorcycle and patrol boat have forced the horse into retirement except on special occasions or for special service.

Frost which struck many southern Saskatchewan areas this week probably did more good than harm for farmers, Dr. E. A. Hurd believes. Dr. Hurd, cereals specialist at the federal research station at Regina, said the light frost Tuesday and Wednesday nights did not do much damage to crops because most were harvested or swathed. It probably helped the flax crop. He said many farmers had been plowing the flax crop of the season to help dry out flax to enable it to ripen faster. Lowest reading of the week was at Boggy Creek, just outside Regina, where the reading was 25. A reading of 26 was reported at Yellow Grass, southeast of Regina, and readings of 27 and 28 degrees were made at the Regina experimental farm Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

Garden Notes

They Can Take It

By M. V. CHESNUT
SHRUBS FOR EXPOSED POSITION
(W.G., Salt Spring Island)—A very good shrub for your sunny but windswept seashore garden is Escallonia laevis, with small shiny leaves and tiny tubular pink flowers. Another toughie is Atriplex halimifolia — not much on blossoms, but it has attractive silvery grey foliage and is a bound for punishment, taking even salt sea spray without damage. Atriplex will sometimes be cut down by frost in a very severe winter, but it will regenerate from the roots and become back stronger and more vigorous than ever.

and appreciates a dressing of old rotted manure about this time of year. It should be very well rotted and crumbly, and should be tucked in around and under the leaves for, if any manure lodges in the crown of the plant, it will almost certainly spoil the embryo flower buds.

One of the troubles we have with the Christmas Rose is the chaste white flowers are carried on fairly short stems, close to the ground, and the petals are easily ruined by rain splashing mud into the blossoms. The manure mulch will help some by covering the bare patches of soil between the plants but, if you want to pick the flowers this winter in perfect condition, it is better to cover the plants, using a bottomless wooden box with a sheet of plastic tacked over it, putting it on about the time when the flowers are showing a trace of white. This improvised cold-frame will also help lengthen the stems.

ripe, so it is a good idea to tie up any selected seed cones in a cheesecloth bag so the seeds won't be lost when the cone shatters.

If you have a greenhouse or cold-frame, sow your collected seeds in pots of equal parts sandy loam soil and peat moss, or sow in the fall in sheltered seed beds outdoors. Incidentally, the seeds of the monkey puzzle tree are edible, with a pleasant nut-like flavor.

YELLOW PERENNIALS (R.K., Victoria) — Some good yellow and orange perennial flowers for your daughter to plant in her Pesticide garden would be: Anemone, two to three feet tall, blooming from July to September; Dandelion or Leopard's Bane, two to three feet and flowering very early in the spring; Geum, one to two feet, in flower almost all summer long; Kniphofia or Red Hot Poker, two to five feet depending on variety, blooming July to October; Rudbeckia or Cone-flower, particularly their fine new varieties known as the Gloriosa daisies, three to five feet, August and September.

All these plants are reliably winter-hardy in the Okanagan.

Friend Block Wails to ART BUCHWALD

School Costs Rock Parent

The opening of the school year and the tight money situation are working hardships on many parents.

My friend Block was in despair when I saw him the other day.

"When Roger was born," Block said, "we immediately took out an insurance policy for his education. Now because of inflation and the high cost of schooling we've used it all up, and Roger still has six months to go."

"College is that expensive?" I said.

"What do you mean college?" Block said. "Roger goes to Nursery school."

"Nursery school, huh?"

"Twenty five hundred dollars a year, not counting the year-book or the prom," Block said. "I guess our big mistake was sending Roger to pre-nursery school. You start a kid at three in school and then you have no money left for his serious education when he becomes five."

"If I had to do it all over again I would probably let him stay in his sand box, but Alice was adamant about him getting a good solid background."

"Couldn't you borrow some money from the bank to let Roger finish out nursery school?"

"Well, we did borrow $1,000 at the beginning of the summer."

"What happened to it?"

doesn't seem to face him at all. Kids take everything for granted these days."

"You haven't suggested to Roger he could wait on tables to earn part of the tuition himself?"

"Alice is against it. She says nursery school should be a happy time for a child and a kid shouldn't have to worry about working just because his father hadn't made adequate plans for his education."

"You seem to be on a spot," I admitted. "But I guess the day Roger graduates from nursery school you'll realize all the sacrifice and agony was worthwhile."

"I probably would, but Roger has already indicated he wants to go on to first grade."

Character Not Enough

By SYDNEY HARRIS

Since there are more people in the world with good characters than with good minds, the world makes a lopsided judgment of its leaders.

We are perfectly aware of the danger in a man with a specious mind and a small character; but we are not aware of equal, if different, dangers in a man with a lofty character and a small mind.

The brilliance of a Iago or Richard III cannot conceal their lamentable deficiencies of character; but if we study history, instead of literature, we shall find that more troubles have been visited upon humanity by the well-meaning, upright man with a deplorable deficiency of mind.

For every war that has been started by an unscrupulous genius, a dozen have been started by honorable men whose narrow and rigid mentality made it impossible for them to see beyond the ends of their noses.

The tragic mistakes of the British Empire in the 18th and 19th centuries were not the result of intellectual cunning, but the stupidity of men who were not broad enough to foresee the evil consequences of colonialism and imperialism.

And, in Germany, the men who paved the way for Hitler were honorable, patriotic dullards like Hindenburg, whose moral rectitude covered an abyss of ignorance and befuddled minds.

We appreciate good character because we know that it means well toward us; and we suspect brilliance of mind because we know that, unless checked by a high ethical sense, it can be fatally used against us. We feel more comfortable with amiable simplicity than we do with the complex personality of a first-rate mind.

This is only natural, but it would be prudent for us to be aware of the perils on the one side as on the other. The ideal answer, of course, is a man who has both character and brains; but a Lincoln arises with pathetic rareness in the history of mankind.

According to the Buddhists, there are only three sins: ill-will, sensuality, and stupidity. We may not look upon stupidity as a sin for it is not a voluntary act — but the consequences of ill-will or unbridled appetites.

But as long as the world lives in fear, we shall respond to people emotionally, not rationally. The man of character soothes our fears and gives us the faith that somehow we shall muddle through together.

In the highly organized, not to say explosive, society of the 20th century, this is scarcely a sensible or farsighted attitude to have.

Knowledge without character is wicked, and character without knowledge is wasteful. We tell the man of mind, "It is not enough"; we should tell the man of character the same.

Meteor Breaks Up

Sky Explodes Into Daylight

TORONTO (CP) — A giant meteor broke up in a spectacular flash over southern Ontario and the northeastern U.S. Saturday night, triggering thousands of telephone calls to police and news media.

Burning fragments were reported to have scattered a huge area and the fireball was so brilliant that sightings were reported from as far apart as Denver, Colo., and St. Eustache, Que.

Residents of at least nine states reported sighting the meteor blazing across the northeastern sky, turning the night to garish day.

TRACKED BY RADAR

An official at the U.S. Coast Guard station in Port Huron, Mich., said the fireball was tracked on a radar screen. He said apparently the meteor broke up and the bulk of it landed in Lake Huron off of Harbor Beach, Mich., about 60 miles north of Sarnia.

As the meteor broke up a shower of sparks cascaded earthwards, and two fires were reported by police in the Sudbury area.

PLANE MISSED

An airplane pilot flying from Peterborough to London, Ont., said a meteorite fell past his plane about a mile north of Woodstock, Ont.

The pilot, Bruce Cannon of London, said he was flying at 4,000 feet when the fireball flamed out just below his flight path.

PIECES SCATTERED

Ontario Provincial Police reported a piece of the meteor fell to the ground near Huntsville, Ont., about 100 miles east of Toronto.

In Buffalo, N.Y., a flaming object lit up the skies over wide areas of New York State and police had reports that it may have fallen into Lake Erie.

OVER OHIO

However, a spokesman for the U.S. Air Force at Hancock Field in Syracuse, N.Y., said tracking equipment recorded it as continuing to travel past Ohio.

Over northern Ohio, the light of the meteor was so bright, several persons said it turned the evening sky as light as day.

Ex-Lions Big Draw —But Steelers Lose

Despite steady rain and competition from the horse racing, Victoria Steelers drew 2,121 spectators to MacDonald Park for their first home game in the Pacific Football League.

Steelers, however, lost 20-0 to powerful Seattle Ramblers.

Red Guard is composed primarily of Chinese boys and girls in late teens or early 20s with worker or peasant background.

Troops to Curb Guards

HONG KONG (AP) — Regular Chinese army troops have moved into Canton to curb a violent group of youthful Red Guards reported to have mistreated the aged and infirm, travellers from Communist China reported Saturday.

Signs from Peking, however, were that the purge of so-called rightists from the Chinese Communist party continued, with indications that new heads might roll from the top echelons. (See story Page 3.)

Travellers from Canton reported that regular army troops started patrolling Canton's streets Wednesday night and early Thursday. Cantonese Red Guards had resisted efforts from Red Guards sent from Peking to hold down violence against persons accused of "bourgeois habits and customs," the travellers said.

They added there had been clashes between the Canton Red Guards and those sent from Peking.

Purge Continues

Soviet Signs Target Of Chinese

It was reported the army patrols had come from Peking because Canton military leaders had kept hands off the Red Guards.

The Red Guards, compared by some to the Hitler youth in Germany during the Second World War, were formed to protect Chairman Mao Tse-tung and his leadership and to help carry out the "great proletarian cultural revolution" — a purge decreed by the Communist Party Central Committee in Peking last month.

Leaders of that revolution ordered Saturday that the full force of the purge be brought to bear on "the handful of bourgeois rightists who have sneaked into the Communist party and are still clinging to power."

MOSCOW (UPI) — Communist Chinese Red Guards have launched an anti-Soviet rampage in Shanghai, Pravda reported today.

The report said the guards have pulled down Soviet emblems and organized anti-Russian demonstrations.

Pravda made no mention of reports by travellers reaching Hong Kong that Russians had been beaten up in Shanghai.

SMITH NEAR FINAL BREAK?

SALISBURY (Reuters)

—Opinion hardened here Saturday that Prime Minister Ian Smith will declare Rhodesia a republic on or about Nov. 11, the first anniversary of his white-minority regime's seizure of independence from Britain.

A statement to parliament by Smith several months ago that the government was not considering any move toward republic status has not allayed persistent rumors that this is just around the corner.

Saturday's Rhodesia's Herald, the only daily newspaper in this Rhodesian capital, asks in an editorial: "Can the conclusion be escaped that the logical end of the first part of the road Rhodesia is now treading is a formal declaration of status as an independent republic outside the Commonwealth?"

NOT CENSORED

The fact that this editorial was not censored led some observers here to believe that the government now might be moving toward such a declaration and that the publication of the editorial might help pave the way toward public acceptance of it.

LONDON (AP) — British Prime Minister Wilson announced Saturday night he is sending two top men to Rhodesia. They are expected to seek some way of bringing that rebellious white-ruled colony to acceptance of eventual Negro-majority rule.

FLY TONIGHT

An announcement from Wilson's 10 Downing Street office said Herbert Bowden, new secretary for Commonwealth affairs, and Sir Elwyn Jones, attorney-general, will fly to Salisbury tonight.

The announcement added they will "visit Rhodesia for purposes indicated in the communiqué on Rhodesia issued by the Commonwealth prime minister's meeting."

ALL SECTIONS

That communiqué stipulated that "all sections" of Rhodesian opinion — 4,000,000 Negroes against 200,000 whites — should be consulted on majority-rule agreement.

Prime Minister Smith seized independence for Rhodesia from Britain Nov. 11 last and ever since has scored pressure — diplomatic and economic — to

George Tagged As Baggage

WOOLEY, England (UPI) —

Judith Sharp, 12, and her grandfather boarded the bus and paid their fares, eight cents each. Because Judith had George with her, she had to pay an additional seven cents.

George is a mouse.

"What's in that basket?" the bus conductor asked Judith.

"My mouse," she replied. "That'll be seven cents more, please," the conductor said, explaining that anything alive which rides the bus must pay the fare.

"Ridiculous," a bus company spokesman said of the mouse fare Saturday. He said George should have been classified as luggage. He said the rule concerning animals would apply to a dog or a large uncrated animal — but not to a mouse in a four-inch-square basket.

The spokesman said Judith — who takes George everywhere she goes — will get her seven cents back. George had no comment. Not even a squeak.

One Twin Dies Following Separation

TORONTO (CP) — Sherry Ann McGee, one of two Siamese twins successfully separated in a lengthy operation Saturday afternoon, died at the Hospital for Sick Children Saturday night. The second girl, Chrystal Ann, was in critical condition but progressing satisfactorily.

The hospital announcement was made only hours after one of the most skillful surgical teams ever assembled in Canada separated the twins in a six-hour and 25-minute operation. It had been a medical first in Canada.

Doctors reported later that Sherry Ann died of heart failure. An abnormal heart position in the two tiny bodies had almost ended the twins' chances during the operation.

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard McGee of Guelph, Ont., where the twins were born June 2, stayed at the hospital Saturday night following the operation. The McGees have one other child.

STILL PROTRUDING

Chrystal Ann's heart, which had protruded into the chest of her twin, was separated and put back in her chest and the incision closed.

Sherry Ann's heart was still protruding after the operation and doctors feared an attempt to put it back might have fatal results.

Thirteen Whites Arrested For Attacking Negroes

GRENADA, Miss. (AP) — The FBI Saturday arrested 13 white men accused of conspiring in attacks on Negro children at newly desegregated schools. They were taken to Oxford, 45 miles north of here for arraignment before a U.S. commissioner and were released on $1,000 bond each.

U.S. Attorney H. M. Ray said the men were charged with conspiracy to violate the civil rights of the Negroes, who were attacked Monday when desegregated schools opened in Grenada.

ACTION ILLEGAL

The law makes it illegal to "injure, oppress, threaten or intimidate any citizen in the free exercise or enjoyment of any right or privilege secured to him by the Constitution or laws of the United States."

Maximum punishment would be 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

In Jackson, Roy K. Moore, head of the Mississippi office of the FBI, said the 13th man was identified as a justice of the peace, James Richard Ayers.

One of the 13 arrested, Wilburn Ray Carroll, 24, is the son of Constable Grady Carroll who has been sentenced to four months in prison for contempt of court.

Boys Hit By Cars

COURTENAY — Two boys were hit by cars while riding their bicycles, in different parts of the Comox Valley, Saturday. Kenneth Miller, 6, was hit near Comox, and was rushed to a Victoria hospital, where he was serious head injuries. Eddie Shulte, 8, Miracle Beach, is in Campbell River hospital.

De Gaulle Plans Election Call

PARIS (UPI) — President de Gaulle will call next month for new French general elections to be held in March, political sources said Saturday.

The sources said de Gaulle will set the voting date for next March when the mandate of the present National Assembly (Lower House), elected in 1962, runs out. He was not expected to call for an early election. De Gaulle is expected to announce the exact date of the elections at a news conference about Oct. 15, the sources said. Informants said de Gaulle will drop his aloofness toward party politics and issue an appeal at the news conference for a massive return of the outgoing majority.

Teachers Plan Strike

RICHMOND, Calif. (UPI) — An AFL-CIO unit went ahead Saturday with plans to stage California's first teachers' strike Monday.

MORE PICKETS

The teachers plan to throw up additional picket lines around schools which already have been picketed for a week in a strike of non-teaching employees.

Only about 140 of the district's 1,600 teachers observed the picket lines, and classes were well-attended.

But the new strike would probably keep more away. The American Federation of Teachers AFL-CIO, Local 866, has 300 members, and is being encouraged by the mayor, Milton Spinner, a teacher himself.

Five for Young Jockey Great Sandown Start

Devonshire Cream flashes across finish line

Dodgers Down, Others Up

Big Four Collapses

That big game gained Friday by Los Angeles in the frantic National League race was lost again Saturday.

The Dodgers blew a 3-2 lead as Pittsburgh won 9-5 at Los Angeles, their first setback in nine games. And in San Francisco, the Mets blew a 4-3 lead with one out to go and the Giants won 6-4 in 10 innings.

LITTLE RELIEF

Feature of the Pirates victory was the collapse of the big four Dodger relief pitchers—Bob Miller, who took the loss, Phil Regan, Ron Perranoski and starter Joe Mosler. The key blow was Don Clendenen's three-run homer in the seventh.

Two Al Lupo homers gave the Mets their 4-3 lead, until pinch-hitter Jim Ray Hart tied it with a two-out homer in the bottom of the ninth. In the 10th, Willie McCovey's third home run of the day scored Willie Mays to end it all.

MARICHAL SAVED

Until Hart showed up, Juan Marichal seemed sure of his first loss to the Mets after 17 victories.

They, the Dodgers will start Don Drysdale and the Giants Garry Modjeski at Philadelphia opens in Los Angeles and Pittsburgh moves to Frisco.

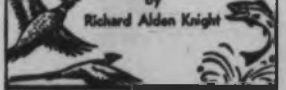

The Phillies just about fell out of it Saturday with an 11-2 drubbing by Houston. In Chicago, St. Louis made it seven straight with a 6-5 squeaker over the Cubs.

In the American League, former Oriole Jerry Adair of the White Sox really sank Baltimore, now 8½ games ahead.

TRIPLE PLAY

Adair's fourth-inning homer provided all the Chicago runs in the 3-1 game, and he was also the central figure in a ninth-inning triple play that ended a Baltimore rally. Frank Robinson hit his 45th homer for Baltimore.

The Yankees fell into a tie for last place as Minnesota won 4-2, giving Jim Kaat a 24-10 record and tying him with Sandy Kousser in the victory race.

Family Faced Ocean

By FRAN FLITTON
NANAIMO — "Kill yourself and your wife if you want, but give your children a chance!" Charles Williams stood on the wharf at False Bay, Lasqueti Island, and tried to save a family from braving a stormy sea in a $15 boat.

But the family, travelling in their tiny craft from Washington to Alaska, would not agree. The family, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Sorensen and their two girls and one son, left Lasqueti bound northward. That was 38 years ago.

This week Mr. Williams, now 78, sat in his comfortable Nanaimo livingroom, and remembered his brush with the Sorensons. He was a well-known resident of Lasqueti when the little boat from Tacoma crashed in one night. The Sorensons had left their home with 35 cents, total assets. They had no food. On the way north, they were eating clams and fish. Each night they would stop at a beach and cook the day's catch over an open fire. Mr. Williams advised the family to tie up their boat across the bay, where it would be protected from storms. Despite warnings of almost certain destruction on the high seas, the Sorensons carried on. And they made it. But Alaska was hardly the promised land. Mr. Sorensen worked in a cannery for more than two years, but the cannery went broke, and Mr. Sorensen never got the $3,500 in wages due him. With $5 in his pocket, he went to the old crab fisherman who had bought the $15 boat when the family arrived in Alaska. He said he wanted to buy back the craft. The fisherman said the boat was wrecked, and lay beneath the waves. He showed Mr. Sorensen where it lay. Mr. Sorensen raised the boat by hand, repaired it, and the family left Alaska, bound south for home. The children and Mr. Sorensen became seafarers, and Mrs. Sorensen took the wheel. She decided against pulling in to Lasqueti Island again, because of the navigation hazards.

One July 1 of this year, Mr. Williams found a note in his door on Lasqueti. It said: "We were here in 1928 with our three children. You had us for dinner. We were bound for Alaska. Sorry we missed you." Letters were exchanged, and the Sorensons are now visiting Mr. Williams.

From Street Corners Come the Timberman

By AGNES FLETT
NANAIMO — There must be something satisfying about a day's work in the open air.

Children at play

Boys confined to Brannan Lake Industrial School near Nanaimo are not known for their stay-at-home qualities.

In fact, there was an average of one escape a day through the month of August, and usually the public only hears about the boys when police are out searching.

But in a cone-picking project in mid-Island forests the boys are allowed to roam for miles working through the woods, and to date there hasn't been a single defection on the job.

Crown Zellerbach foresters say this is the first good cone crop from Douglas firs in seven years.

LITTLE SEED
Douglas fir seed supply is almost exhausted, making it vital to take off the good cone harvest this year.

The government forest service is trying to get all cones available in this year's bumper crop, to ease the threat to reforestation.

PICKERS NEEDED
Private companies are advertising for pickers, with large logging companies hiring their own staffs.

Picking has been going on for two weeks, with one week left to pick the crop.

SCHOOL PROBLEM
The big problem was a shortage of young workers ... they were all at school.

Crown's Jack Tukham said young pickers are needed for their agility and because men who are too heavy will damage younger trees.

DAY WORK
This need led to use of boys from the industrial school.

The boys are taken to the woods, about 40 miles from the school, after rising at 6 a.m., and they work all day.

GOOD BOYS
Officials say the boys are good workers.

They can make as much as $25 a day. This money is put into a trust fund to help them when they leave Brannan Lake.

RECREATION AID
Some of the money goes to the industrial school as a special fund for recreation.

The boys have picked 1,800 bushels of fir cones in two weeks, about 900 pounds of fir seed.

FUTURE CLEAR
This amount of seed will reforest 45,000 acres of land with 18,000,000 seedlings.

The boys at Brannan Lake will leave their mark on the B.C. Forest Industry. The trees will be worth millions of dollars to the economy in future generations.

Logging Walkout Ends — Talks Start Tuesday

COURTENAY — The nine-day walkout is over.

More than 250 loggers will go back to their jobs Monday.

The IWA men voted Saturday to end the work stoppage, though union officials still maintained the situation was a lockout, not a strike.

The company involved is Comox Logging, a division of Crown Zellerbach.

The men voted to return to their jobs after they received a guarantee from the company that it would hold discussions with IWA officials Tuesday.

The men went home Sept. 8, in a dispute over travel time pay, wages, and safety procedures.

Jack Moore, regional IWA official, said after an on-the-spot investigation, that the company should talk about the dispute before work resumed.

But the company insisted unless the men were back on the job, there would be no negotiation.

Donald Porritt, industrial relations boss for Crown on the island, said the union appeared to be demanding things in excess of conditions in the recently-signed master agreement.

Mr. Moore said the storm blew up when the workers requested a meeting to discuss "some job problems."

He said the men were waiting in the marshalling yard for the expected meeting with management, when Crown officials sent the supervisory staff home.

COMPANY ONUS

According to Mr. Moore, the workers then had no choice but to go to their homes.

"The onus for the cessation of work rests entirely with the company," he claimed.

Thunderbird's Farewell

COMOX — Flight Lieutenant Robert S. McCartney has retired from the RCAF, following a long and impressive career that has taken him to many areas of the globe.

He served as secretary to the chief of the air staff until 1943 when he went overseas as adjutant of 426 (Thunderbird) Squadron of bomber command at Linton-On-Ouse in Yorkshire.

In 1944 he was transferred to Canadian Headquarters in London where he was personal assistant to the deputy air officer commanding RCAF overseas.

He was soon to be transferred as adjutant, and incidentally as the first member of 436 Squadron in India. He was subsequently awarded the MBE for his services during this period.

In October 1946, he took his release and entered business in Victoria for two years prior to accepting a position as national secretary of the RCAF Association. He maintained this position until 1952 when he transferred from the reserves to the active RCAF, and almost immediately proceeded overseas as accounts officer at 30 Air Materiel Base in Langar, England.

Following this final overseas tour, he returned to headquarters in Ottawa for five years and finally to Comox where he has been pay accounts officer for his last five years in service.

He is retiring in the Comox Valley.

The accident happened about 12:30 a.m. Saturday.

The driver of the car was John Hagar of Duncan.

A two-car collision occurred at the Silver Bridge on the Trans-Canada Highway.

Rain Brings Crashes At Nanaimo, Duncan

NANAIMO — When the rain comes, the accidents start.

A vehicle driven by James Carruthers slid into the back of a car driven by Joseph Gary Fearon, both of Nanaimo.

As they entered the intersection at Bowen Road and Comox Road, Carruthers' vehicle apparently ran into the rear of Fearon's car.

There were no injuries, but damage was estimated at $250.

Estimated damage of $350 was done to a vehicle driven by Rex Dayley, Wellington, as he attempted to make a left hand turn at Comox and Terminal.

Dayley ran into a lamp standard.

DUNCAN — No one was injured in two minor accidents occurring late Friday night and early Saturday morning.

About 11:45 p.m. Friday a car hit into the cement wall on Hospital Hill.

The driver of the car was John Hagar of Duncan.

The accident happened about 12:30 a.m. Saturday.

Hockey Year Bright

NANAIMO — There is an excellent start for a new year in the sports field.

Outgoing president of the Nanaimo Minor Hockey Association, Eric Kneene, said that 400 boys between the ages of 8 and 18 years have signed up for the 1966-1967 hockey season.

The classification for the boys are peanuts and peewees, 8 to 12 years of age; bantams, 12 to 14; midgets, 14 to 16; and the juveniles, 16 to 18 years.

There will be practices Monday, Wednesday and Friday with Saturday being the busiest day, when practices will start at 6:00 a.m. until 10:00.

Teams of Vancouver Island juveniles includes Esquimalt, Victoria, Nanaimo, Port Alberni, and they hope to add Comox and Powell River to the system this season.

Games will alternate on Sundays between these areas and Mr. Kneene stated "I expect this year's tournaments to be just as successful as last year's."

Incoming president is Bill Wockatz.

Big Day

PARKSVILLE — Today is an important occasion for the parish of St. Edmund's, Parksville for it marks the dedication of the church in a special service to be conducted by the Archbishop of British Columbia, Harold Sexton.

This special dedication service, which happens only once in the lifetime of a church, will be held at 11 a.m.

The Rev. Eric Blackstock, Vicar of St. Anne's and St. Edmund's, will take his ordination vows on this occasion.

Later the same day the archbishop will consecrate the remaining portion of the cemetery at French Creek at 3 p.m.

'I Can Count from One to Ten in My Sleep'

By MARIE CADORETTE
SHAWNIGAN LAKE — A kindergarten of one type or another has been in operation at Shawnigan Lake for 14 years.

The first kindergarten was run co-operatively by local mothers who took turns and assisted the teacher by being "mother's helper."

Now, kindergarten is privately owned by Mrs. Dorothy Head who has been teaching for 15 years.

"Lots of children can play but they cannot play in a group," commented Mrs. Head. "I don't think they should play with trucks all the time. They should get around and do other things."

Getting in with the gang is a very important business. This is one of the big reasons why there are schools, so that youngsters can broaden their horizons and take in a larger social world.

Much of kindergarten is very repetitious. "The mornings are a bit long until they begin writing," she said. "Sometimes I feel I can count one to ten in my sleep."

"I don't believe in doing specified things on a set day," she said.

"We see what the mood is." This is known as the Froebel method of teaching.

Froebel, the father of kindergarten, in 1840, wrote, "Kindergarten shall give them employment suited to their natures, strengthen their bodies, exercise their senses, employ their waking minds, make them acquainted judiciously with nature and society, cultivate especially the heart and temper and lead them to the foundation of all living — a unity with themselves."

The children prepare for writing by doing much finger work such as crayoning, painting or just playing with blocks.

The first hour of kindergarten is devoted to free play.

The children are allowed to do what ever they wish — play with trains, paint, build with blocks or make pies, cookies and cakes with dough. After a vigorous hour of play they sit down for a snack.

Sometimes they listen to records.

But children can not sit for long.

Organized marching to music follows snack break. Later, there is a story telling time frequently interrupted with enthusiastic questions or desperate rushes to the washroom.

Costs and hats are put on, the children grab lunch pails and run outside to swing or climb monkey bars while they wait for their rides home. She started her pre-school class four years ago with 15 pupils attending.

Today she has 40 pupils. "I have only 15 at one time in the afternoon or morning sessions on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday," said Mrs. Head.

"I think it's good for the children to have a break." On Wednesday mornings she has a nursery group. The main purposes of kindergarten:

● The kindergarten is to help children feel adequate in the new world of school.

● A child learns to understand and to live intelligently in the world of school.

● A kindergarten protects children from hazards to health and safety, and it helps a child find a comfortable, contributing place in his group.

● Finally, a kindergarten teaches children to manage themselves, their materials, the routines of the day, to take initiative in planning and doing things.

It was during the late thirties and the great depression. About this time across the stage of "Festung Europa" strutted the semi-comic figures of the great dictators and the brown shirts and the black shirts, whilst we here at home in B.C. continued in the traditional checkered shirts of the B.C. coast brethren. But they were hard times, and like many others after my job folded up I was forced to take to the sea, salmon fishing, which if you believe in newspaper stories, is something like a gold rush,

Of course they only record the catches of the "high boats." So many like myself were glad to take a chance of making a cleanup. Living as I did then in a small B.C. up-coast fishing village, I was soon put wise on how to go about setting up as a professional fisherman.

Accordingly I acquired a 32-foot boat very much in the second-hand class. My friends, all Scots-Canadian professional fishermen, had many cures for my boat's shortcomings, one of which I recall most vividly.

They decided "she had not been properly christened. That had to be fixed. Supplies of Scotch (un-watered) whiskey were obtained and brought aboard. Soon the christening was in full swing. The guests all sat around the engine, which had the head off for valve grind, and they naturally assumed it was a new type four-hole ash tray, for the next morning when I peered with patriotic eyes (red, white and blue) at my engine, it was full to the top with cigarette butts and matches.

Late in June we headed north, a small flotilla of some six boats. Taking full advantage of fair tides and anchoring in some bay when the tide was against us, we soon reached Hardy Bay, the last stop before crossing Queen Charlotte Sound.

My escorts, who had made this trip oftentimes, said that we should head across the Sound at 4 a.m. before the usual westerly wind comes up. Four a.m. proved foggy and there was some talk and shaking of heads at the weather. But after a quick breakfast we headed into the dense fog and huge sea swell that are a summer feature hereabouts.

Having no compass I merely followed my friends, but at one stage after a very dense fog patch I lost our flotilla and was heading for Japan when the sun dispersed the fog enough for me to see far to starboard what looked like a vast invasion fleet. I increased my speed and changed course and in time came up with one of my Scots pals who had turned back to look for me.

We soon caught up, passing Pine Island to starboard, and ahead was Cape Caution which we gave a wide berth. Soon Egg Island showed up to port. Thence we passed through a maze of islands separated by narrow channels which led us into calm water in Canoe Pass, a long channel separated from Rivers Inlet and sheltered from the winds which usually roar up the Inlet daily from about 10 a.m. to nightfall.

The large fleet of fish boats of all sizes at this point had dispersed, most having gone up-Inlet to the various canneries for which they fished.

Today fewer canneries operate upcoast. Fish are brought to Vancouver and Fraser River plants by large packers instead of being canned where caught.

The sockeye season started next day, so we all hustled ourselves with our gear, rigging lines from bow-post and midships so that we could do a towing job on the net to keep it off rocks as required. Buoys and lanterns were overhauled, for the quarter-mile net must have a signal light each end when set at night. Likewise a colored flag must be flown from the buoys at each end of the net in daytime, the color depending on which cannery company you sell your catch to.

On the opening day with boats stocked with provisions, oil and gas for a week, we headed up the choppy inlet and at 5 p.m. exactly put over the buoy with its lantern. Then with my boat going half-speed ahead I payed out enough net to take a hold in the sea. Then to the steering wheel I steered straight for the beach, the net paying out smoothly over the stern roller, the cedar curbs holding the net up in the water, the lead line below holding the mesh tight so that when sockeye hit the net at speed they entered as far as the gills which held the fish secure in the net provided the net fitted the sockeye and also provided the seals did not eat the bulk of them as they sometimes did.

The second buoy was then put over, or left secured on deck with its lantern so that the boat was anchored to the shore end of the net. The fisherman could then go below and sleep. In which case his net may drift against another net when it was not surprising to find you had no fish in the morning save in the few fathoms close to your boat. Again you could stay awake and keep watch with a spotlight. But that wouldn't help if the current changed, and your net concertinas and perhaps wraps itself around your boat a few times.

The thump of cork on your hull will keep you alert and informed even if you are in your bunk. Or the tide may set you and your net along the rocky shoreline. Towing one end of the net out into the inlet was the best move then: haul in that portion, then tow out the rest of the net, which may cause a few holes if the net was on barnacles.

A good night may net you anything from 50 fish to 500 fish. Then again it may not. You may spend all night battling wind, tides, rocks and over-anxious competitors who "set" in front of your net, effectively blocking off the sockeye which seem to travel mostly at night. Sometimes the night is calm, and if you are in the middle of the Inlet, not too crowded, you might sneak a few hours' sleep.

I recall one night that was calm after a stiff up-Inlet wind all day which raised enough 'chop' to stop and pound at the boat as I lay stern to the wind tied to one end of the net. However, this particular night was beautifully calm and an air of peace pervaded the inlet as eager fishermen hauled in their nets and made for the head of the inlet where the river becomes part of the Inlet, merging its light green waters with the darker green salt water. This is the boundary or Fisheries Department limit, beyond which you may not set a net.

But many would set right on the line, hoping for a big catch of the sockeye which on arriving at the fresh water would mill around there for a period before continuing upstream to spawn and die.

I tried this boundary set once or twice, but it was like an inferno. Out would be my net, then immediately another would be set in front of me and perhaps behind me. The bark of the heavy-duty gas engine, the steam rising from the exhausts, mingling with shouts and angry yells to someone who had set before his turn or "corked" another net, made a din impossible to describe.

It was a mad insensible affair repeated 24 hours a day.

Silly business when all the fish could be caught by one man operating a trap such as was permitted in earlier less frantic days. Under that method so many fish could be allowed to escape and spawn and ample retained for the canneries. However, this would put some 2,000 men and boats with nets out of action, but would save untold useless effort and hardship.

Having had my "go" at the boundary I headed down inlet into what I thought was sanity. Little did I know! About half way down inlet I found what I thought to be a not too crowded place, so there I set my net upon the waters and went below and cooked a meal with the frying pan and Coleman gas stove—standard practice.

Through the open hatch door I heard and interpreted the sounds of the Inlet. The gentle slap of water on the hull, the rattle of cork against the starboard side, meaning my boat had swung round and was lying alongside my net or some net. So up on deck to take a look. With a 14-foot oar I pushed against the net hoping to swing the boat away but no! Again the maddening rattle of corks on the same side.

I stood gazing around. The night was unusually still and quiet, the huge ramparts of mountains on either side looked down on man and his folly. A half mile away the sound of a large packer could be heard making its way upstream with a long tow of dories, double-ended flatbottomed boats without power, other than a 14-foot pair of "struggle sticks" as they were called in those days.

These fearless men lived under a bit of canvas in the bow, their nets in the stern. They made several trips a day of several miles each downstream. When ready to go up, the cannery packer would come by and the doryman would hook onto the towline with a hitch which could be let go with a simple jerk. Then once more the struggle sticks would ply the waters 'til the net was set.

The thousands of lanterns and spotlights cast an eerie glow over the midnight scene. Afar off across the water I could hear an Indian fisherman singing a melancholy tribal song. I went below, had a smoke, then very tired I said to myself: "All is quiet?"

I lay on top of the bunk. Sometime later I awakened to hear the howling of the wind, different this time from the daily westerlies. There was the rattle of corks all around the hull, a most ominous rattle. Quickly I got on deck. It was blowing hard and raining, but not westerly this time, but southeasterly—most unusual.

There seemed to be boats and nets everywhere. I donned my PAIR OF CLAYSTONE concretions from Prince George area.

ROCK FULL OF FOSSILS from Englishman River.

Hardly anyone can see his first good display of rocks without pausing here and there in amazement. There is so great a variety of fascinating articles, ranging from the ones that are delightful without being altered a bit from the way they were found, through to those with finest aspects brought out by the lapidary art. All kinds will be on display later this week at the third annual Rock and Hobby Show, sponsored by the Victoria Lapidary and Mineral Society.

We have some interesting details about the Society, but first let's have a closer look at that group of rocks which are so acceptable just the way they come.

In the group are such things as the saucy little claystone concretions looking all the world like intricate carvings; the natural crystals lining a hollow rock like a midnight sky full of stars; or petrified wood surprisingly faithful to its origin, with all growth rings showing and the stubby starts of branches and rough bark exterior clearly on view, but often with bright colors added, depending on the mineral ingredients involved when the wood was changed to stone.

Natural crystals show up in an amazing range of shapes. Selenite, for instance, appears in the hour-glass form, and as beautiful white "ram's horns." Pyrite can be a perfect cube, large or small, and the individual faces of garnets perfectly diamond-shaped. The "desert rose" is a crystal of barite.

Perhaps the best known and possibly the loveliest of crystals are those of quartz which may vary from clear to amethyst purple in color, and in size from microscopic to several feet long.

We must include among the intriguing natural rocks, those filled with fossils of all shapes and sizes. Under certain circumstances, fossils, many million of years old, may be found in the same material which forms into the odd-looking concretions. Many a rockhound has broken open a concretion and found himself looking at a creature which lived during the same period as the dinosaurs. Among the larger fossils are the ammonites, ancient sea creatures whose flat spiral shell may measure several feet across.

Then there are the rocks such as picture jasper in which veinlets and color variations create the most natural-looking landscapes of rolling hills dotted with trees, all natural in the rock but brought out best when smoothed and polished. Our local picture rhodonite, in deep rose with black veinlets, provides fine sunset scenes. Such rocks are often shaped and framed for display as pictures, rather than used as jewelry pieces.

Now for some background information on the Victoria Lapidary and Mineral Society, which organizes the Rock and Hobby Show. Responding to the swelling tide of interest in the rock hobby Lillian Alling walked from New York City to the Bering Sea to reach Siberia! By her route, 6,000 miles, half through some of the most life-defying hostile mountain wilderness in the world. We will not see her like again. No one knows if her four-year journey brought her at last the goal sought with such determination, or death on the bleak edge of the Bering Sea, which we know she reached.

THE UNBELIEVABLE WALK

By FRANCIS DICKIE

If death her portion, peace to her brave soul after those dreadful days of agonized privation to mind and body on awful trails that led to . . . . . ?

Her past, the strange compulsion which drove her to continue this venture of madness against every obstacle of man, and Nature at its worst, remain wrapped in mystery. Throughout all the days months and years of her walking, mystery continued to surround her. She never confided in any one of the people, civilians, policemen, magistrate, or prison warden, all of whom kindly, compassionate, charitable both in efforts to help, or hinder her on this fantastic trek.

Sensitive people along the way, from the paving and railroad tracks across the settled portion of the land, New York, Chicago, St. Paul, Winnipeg, Vancouver, British Columbia, and in the lonely cabins of the telegrapher-lineamen which marked the Yukon Telegraph, all were affected by the unfathomable yearning in her eyes. This frail Russian woman was as one forced on by an over-powering compulsion. Her oft repeated answer to all questions: "I go to Siberia."

Recalling her slogan, and the fog and snow-shrouded 8,000-foot mountain she climbed, one is vividly reminded of Longfellow's poem Excelsior. This must be read to complete understanding of the comparison. Yet we remain without comprehension of what urge drove her to perform such unbelievable walk, a feat of such magnificent folly it staggers even the boldest; an attempt the Provincial Police of British Columbia, and a magistrate, in all humanity, strove to stop. In vain. Even prison bars, only temporarily halted.

At the outset, among the hurrying millions of New York City from where she started, only these sparse facts are known: She was 25 years old, came to New York City from Russia. Why she came; how long she stayed there; why she started for Siberia, we know nothing. We know she worked as a maid, spoke good English, and, despite her occupation, apparently was well educated. She told the British Columbia Provincial Police that, when after months of work she was unable to save enough steamer fare for return to Russia, she decided to walk! She had studied in New York's Public Library books on the north and maps. From the latter she had drawn a rough outline of her journey. This the police thought a remarkable example of cartography on the part of one untrained. When the police officer at the wilderness town of Hazelton, British Columbia, remonstrated with her at the impossibilities of her plan, she replied: "There is only one big difficulty: the 50 miles of Bering Strait. I cannot walk that, but I will cross."

Apparently she must have left New York City early in the spring of 1927, because she arrived at the second Cabin on the Yukon Telegraph line after cutting through the forest of British Columbia, on Sept. 10. Even this an amazing record of walking averaging 30 miles a day! Her ability to travel fast was repeated even in the rough going of woods and mountain; something continually remarked upon by the experienced telegrapher-lineamen, whose cabins every 20 miles guarded the wire, and also the provincial policemen who tried to bar her path.

During the earlier portion of her sturdy marching she was plainly, neatly dressed in brown skirt and shirt waist, stout walking boots. What made her noticeable was the scant head-dress, common to Russian peasant women, fashion widely adapted later by teen-agers all over North America. She carried on her back a small knapsack.

New York, Chicago, St. Paul, Winnipeg, Vancouver, B.C., left behind. Then on this chill afternoon of Sept. 10, 1927, the telegraph-lineaman at Cabin 2 answered a knock on his log home and office to stare at the figure of a young woman in a skirt almost in rags, torn shirt waist and, wearing of all footwear, running shoes, through the broken sides of which her bare feet showed.

After giving her a meal, he questioned her. When, in answer to where she was going, she replied: "Siberia," he knew he had to do something to prevent her. He sat down to his key and called Const. J. A. Wyman at Provincial Police headquarters in the wilderness town of Hazelton, informed him of the woman's condition. "And she says she's going to Siberia!" was his incredulous comment.

Wyman was an officer experienced in this wilderness where September marked the beginning of bad travelling weather on the trails beyond. Winter was fast approaching, north winds waiting to swoop down from Alaska with death-bringing blizzards; already fog hung low over the mountains beyond Cabin 3, a region where even hardy lineamen in the past had become temporarily lost. The constable instructed the telegrapher to keep the woman at Cabin 2 until he arrived.

Wyman brought the woman back from Cabin 2, despite her pleading, and then defiant protest; finally however, she yielded without the officer having to use force. At Hazelton headquarters Wyman turned Lillian over to the district officer, Sgt. W. J. Service. Again, in answer to his question of her destination, the unchanging curt reply: "To Siberia."

Service gazed almost in awe at this woman, regged, wraithlike from privation of the heroic physical demands made by the Yukon Telegraph's rugged trail. Her gaunt features and frame cried aloud of malnutrition. Kindly Service strove to dissuade her. He pointed out the nearness of winter, that she endangered her life in going on. When she repeated her intention, he remonstrated: "In the clothes you are wearing you will freeze to death; and you are without food."

Her reply was fantastic: "I have three loaves of bread and some tea. I must go. Please do not stop me." As she addressed him alone from her eyes tragic pleading, a beyond-earth compelling light suggesting to the seasoned frontiersman a motive kin to madness.

Sgt. Service was in a difficult position. Had he the legal right to prevent a peaceful citizen walking in a free country? Out of the kindness of his heart toward this strange foreign female, to prevent her from committing certain suicide, he hit upon a plan: he arrested her for vagrancy! The police matron search Lillian. She had two $10 bills, and under her skirt dangling a light thin iron bar 18 inches long. When, a few minutes later, the sergeant remarked to Lillian the bar would be useless against wild animals, she answered curtly: "It's protection against men." She little realized how differently, how gallantly helpful in the near future the telegrapher-lineyman on the lone British Columbia-Yukon Telegraph trail would treat her.

Brought before Justice of The Peace William Grant in Hazelton Police Court on Sept. 21, 1927, Lillian was charged with vagrancy. However, the very fact that she did have $20, and was on a peaceful walk, made doubtful the strict legality of the charge. However, Magistrate Grant, moved by the same humane intention as the provincial police to prevent the woman's folly at this time of year and hopeful that detention would change her mind, overcame the legal technicality in her favor by one of his own: he fined her $25 and costs, for carrying an offensive weapon!

As her bankroll was limited to $20, making it impossible to pay the fine, he gave her alternative sentence of two months in Oakalla Prison, at Vancouver.

Thus Lillian was saved her $20, and assured of free reasonably decent food and lodging till even she would realize it was impossible to continue, at least for the time being the hazardous trail leading across British Columbia, the Yukon, Alaska, and into Siberia. Also, in the mind of the magistrate was belief that in these months of confinement Lillian would have time for reflection and forgo her folly.

Nothing to it: neither police officer's, magistrate's or warden's counsel, nor prison reflection one whit abated this Russian woman's obsession to continue her pilgrimage.

When released from Oakalla Prison the second week in November she obtained kitchen work in a Vancouver restaurant. At the end of May she had saved enough money to continue northward. As a homing pigeon is moved by forces beyond our ken, thus too, undoubtedly was stirred this woman immigrant to a deed of prowess surpassing the daring of even our imagination: an instinctive drive to reach the land of her birth, a compulsion which no logical reason, no fear of man or beast, nor Nature's most dreadful obstacles, not even death itself, could deter.

By now she was a figure known to the provincial and city police. Thus it was near the end of June, 1928, Sgt. A. Fairbairn of the Provincial Police, stationed at the railroad division of Smithers, B.C., on the Canadian National main line, received a wire that Lillian was headed toward his district. To his utmost astonishment she reached Smithers on July 19. The distance covered was so great that he questioned her: "Did people give you a lift in their cars?" She answered with proud dignity: "I walked all the way."

Fairbairn made a rough calculation she must have averaged between 30 and 40 miles a day! When she repeated she was going to Siberia, there remained the good months, half of July, and August. At the speed she was going, Sgt. Fairbairn calculated she might with average good luck get over the summit into the Yukon before bad weather. There also was no ground upon which to prevent her proceeding. He did obtain her promise she would report to every one of the cabins on the B.C.-Telegraph-Yukon trail.

"I will do that," she gave her word with great fervor, and thanking him, went her way.

Fairbairn sent a wire to be relayed to all the telegrapher-lineymen who then the year around kept vigil over that single strand across the desolate almost uninhabited distances which connected Yukon and Interior British Columbia with the outside world.

Thus all the operators were on the lookout at all the 20-mile cabins. From cabin to cabin they checked the time of her walking, always amazed these hardy men who too often had to make fast hikes checking when line breaks occurred. And, even over the roughest going, and it was mostly, the wiry Russian maintained an average from 28 to 30 miles a day!

Cabin one to seven reported her safe arrival. By making good time she reached Cabin 8 on Sept. 12, two days later than in the previous year she had reached cabin 2. However, this was a gain of 140 miles.

Cabin 8 was different from one to seven in that two men, Jim Christie and Charlie Janze were stationed as linemen and telegraphers, and occupied two cabins. They were appalled when Lillian arrived. Her clothes were in shreds, shoes very worn. Her face was swollen from continuous bites of mosquitoes, bulging, black and no-secum flies, and badly burned by sun and wind. Yet it was the manner in which she dropped her nearly empty pack and slumped into a chair which conveyed to the men how exhausted from malnutrition her condition.

Yet, even when she rested and had been well fed, they failed to talk her out of continuing. She turned upon them that same visionary exalted light in her eyes, mystically moving, overpoweringly compelling. This time she won over these two experienced outdoorsmen, where she had failed with Const. Wyman and Sgt. Service the previous year.

However, both men were agreed she had to wait and rest until they made her a new and suitable outfit for the conquest of the Summit and the journey onward to Atlin.

In the next three days while she bathed and rested in his cabin which Christie turned over to her, and while they fed her enormous meals, the two men achieved a miracle of outfitting.

They remodelled a pair of Janze's line-riding breeches, of toughest cloth. Janze, also was the smaller of the two. He gave her two shirts, his best, and a new handkerchief for the headress she had always worn, and felt hat over it to keep off the rain. Fortunately, also, Janze feet were small. He gave her a pair of his stout linemen boots. These, with two pair of socks, she found she could comfortably wear. Then, just before her taking leave, Christie gave her a black and white dog and a pack filled with nourishing provisions.

And this dog! What happened in the years following is a fittingly weird accompaniment to the saga of certainly the most astonishing female ever to cross the great lonely expanse of British Columbia, the Yukon and Alaska to Bering Sea.

Though Lillian had already walked far, though she suffered enormous fatigue and pain, and prison interruption, she was in high spirits after three days of rest. She was deeply affected by the gift of the dog, exclaiming: "My first companion. He will always remain with me." How strangely did she keep these final words!

Christie accompanied her as far as Cabin 9. Though this was no longer used as a sending station, there remained accommodation. As the weather held fine, Christie suggested the value of her taking one more day of rest before tackling the endurance test of going over the Summit, leading to Atlin, Dawson and points beyond. Bidding her goodbye he returned to Cabin 8.

We know nothing of Lillian's past previous to her arrival in New York City, nor how long she worked there before beginning her seemingly impossible project. We cannot fathom the prompt working of a mind which carried her will to continue. Indeed, for the few facts about her we have only such meagre details the British Columbia Provincial Police were able to draw from her reluctant replies. Before that moment when telegrapher Christie bade her goodbye at Cabin 9, most of the story of her life remains hidden.

Thus, again, after her crossing the Summit all that is known after she descended is her arrival at the remote mining town of Atlin. Altitude 2,200 feet. At least, there she was long remembered! The inhabitants stared wide-eyed, for Lillian carried atop her knapsack the hide of her black and white dog, lightly stuffed with grass. What caused the animal's death during her walk from the Summit to Atlin, she told no one. The only reference we have to this astonishing banner of loyalty are her own words to Christie when thanking him for the gift: "My first companion. He will always remain with me!"

The first evidence of this is the astonished hotel keeper's recollection in Atlin of her reply to his indiscreet question: "He was my only friend. He will always remain with me."

And that lightly stuffed hide of a black and white dog is the outstanding thing by which she was vividly remembered afterward for years by people scattered across a thousand miles in connection with a weird and silent woman briefly in their midst.

She arrived in Dawson in November, 1928; worked as a waitress. She lived alone, confiding in no one, avoiding companionship after the day's work was done. She had little time for people,

In the settlement and holding of Vancouver Island and the West Coast for the British, the greatest place must be given to James Douglas, Chief Factor of the Hudson's Bay Company and later first governor of the new colony at Victoria. For nearly 50 years he watched over and guided its fortunes, and it is very fitting that he should be called "The Father of British Columbia."

Father of British Columbia

By BEATRICE TODD

He was born in Lanarkshire, Scotland, in 1803. His father, John Douglas, owned large sugar estates in British Guiana. He attended school in Lanark, and there laid the foundations of a sound education.

In 1819 young James Douglas who had not yet reached his 16th birthday entered the service of the North West Company. Sailing from Liverpool on May 7, 1819, on the brig Matthews, he arrived at Quebec on June 25. He set out from Montreal in a fleet of canoes bound for Fort William where he arrived after an arduous journey Aug. 6, 1819. Here was the rather flamboyant headquarters of the second of Canada's great fur trading companies.

After several months at Fort William, Douglas was sent to Isle a la Crosse on the upper waters of the Churchill River. Here he took part in the fighting between the North West and Hudson's Bay Companies. When the union of the companies in 1821 put an end to the strife, he found himself a servant of the new Hudson's Bay Company.

After five years at Isle a la Crosse Douglas was transferred to New Caledonia, as the northern interior of British Columbia was then called. He arrived at Fort MacLeod, Nov. 9, 1825, to find John Tod in charge of the post. Fort MacLeod had the honor of being the first fur post west of the Rocky Mountains. Later he was transferred to Fort St. James on Stuart Lake which was the centre of the fur trade for that region. He made several trips with furs to Fort Vancouver on the Columbia River in what is now the state of Oregon.

Between his trips he found time to court and win the hand of Amelia Connolly, a daughter of the chief factor at Stuart Lake. She was a sweet, lovable girl, a great beauty with a strain of Indian blood inherited from her mother. In the absence of a clergyman, they were married "according to the customs of the country." Later at Fort Vancouver a church ceremony was performed.

On Jan. 30, 1830, Douglas was moved to Fort Vancouver. This was the turning point of his career. From that time his advancement was certain. At Fort Vancouver he held the position of accountant under the direct supervision of Dr. John McLoughlin. Here he earned a reputation as a careful, methodical man with a great mastery of detail. To him McLoughlin entrusted more and more of the internal administration of the fort. All furs from west of the Rockies were brought and shipped to England from that point.

In 1835 Douglas was promoted to the office of Chief Trader. He was now entitled to one share in the profits of the company. He had to make an arduous overland journey to Fort Garry to receive the commission.

Five years later the authority and rights of the Great Company in Oregon were challenged by the bands of American settlers who had squatted on the shores of Puget Sound and the Willamette River. Instead of the north bank of the Columbia being made the boundary as expected by the company, the whole west coast up to Alaska was claimed by the Americans. "Fifty-four-forty or fight" was the popular slogan on which President Polk was elected. The British sent warships to the mouth of the Columbia and war seemed imminent.

To hold Vancouver Island, the company decided to establish a fur post and settlement on its shores. In 1842 Douglas made a voyage to the Island to look over the ground. He made a report favoring the formation of a post at Camosack—his rendering of the native name, Camosun.

He gave as his reasons the following: "As a harbor it is safe and accessible. There is an abundance of timber nearby. Sawmills may be erected on the canal of Camosack, a narrow inlet where the tide rushes in and out with great velocity. There is a range of plains six miles square containing valuable tillage and pasture land."

His report was accepted and on March 1, 1843, Douglas left Fort Vancouver with 15 men to found a new fort on Vancouver Island. He anchored at Shoal Point and landed next day at Clover Point, so-called because the clover was then waist high around him. He chose a site on deep water where vessels could load and unload from the rocks which formed a natural harbor. The Songhees Indians were pleased about his arrival and gave him assistance in building his new fort which he named Fort Victoria.

When the Oregon Treaty settled the boundary on the 49th parallel, the fur trade south of the international border was doomed. The headquarters of trade for the company was transferred to Fort Victoria.

On Jan. 13, 1849, a Royal Grant ceded Vancouver Island to the Hudson's Bay Company at an annual rent of seven shillings on condition that it should establish a settlement of colonists from the United Kingdom or other dominions. Douglas was named the temporary governor of the Island.

On a beautiful day in June, 1849, Douglas and his family arrived at Fort Victoria to take up residence. "The long jagged line of snowy peaks of the Olympic Range across the blue waters of the Straits of Juan de Fuca and the green of the foliage on the Island made it a scene which one cannot readily forget," were the words Douglas used in enthusiastically describing the scene to a friend. From that day on his love of Victoria and the Island never wavered. He used to scatter seeds of the broom on his afternoon rambles along the shore among the ragged rock and over the open meadow lands. The yellow flowers of the green broom familiar now around Victoria are his living monument.

The price of one pound sterling per acre was charged by the Hudson's Bay Company for land. This made settlement slow. In United States by contrast free grants of land were made and the country settled up faster. Land was purchased from the Indians by Douglas on very favorable terms although he tried to play fair with them by allowing them to hunt over unoccupied lands and to carry on their fisheries with the same freedom as before.

Although the British Government had at first appointed Douglas Governor of the Island, it later rescinded its ruling and sent out Blanshard as Governor. There was no clear division of authority between Douglas and Blanshard and it was inevitable trouble between them should arise. In August, 1851, after a great deal of friction, Governor Blanshard resigned and left the colony. James Douglas was then in undisputed control and in September, 1851, was appointed Governor of the Island. He now occupied a dual position representing Her Majesty's Government and the Hudson's Bay Company jointly. This made his position often difficult especially where the interests of the two were conflicting.

The settlers were not satisfied with the company's policy so a council for Vancouver Island was appointed. Douglas shared with the council the administration of the Island, but the meetings of the council were infrequent.

The Crimean War broke out in 1854. The chief result to the Island was the establishment of a British naval base at Esquimalt. A naval hospital was one of the first buildings constructed. Later a drydock was added.

In 1856 Douglas was ordered to set up districts for the establishment of a self-governing assembly for the Island. Four electoral districts, Victoria, Esquimalt, Sooke and Nanaimo, were formed. The first assembly for Vancouver Island met in August, 1856. Dr. John Helmcken was elected Speaker of the House. He was James Douglas' son-in-law. This was the first assembly held west of the Great Lakes.

The policy of the Hudson's Bay Company, the lack of markets, inaccessibility, and especially the high price asked for lands for settlement were the reasons claimed by the settlers for the lack of progress in the Island. Unfortunately they were not included in the Reciprocity Treaty between Britain and the United States. High duties shut off lucrative California markets.

The settlement of the mainland was hastened by the discovery of gold along the Fraser River.
When the news reached California in 1858 the gold rush to the Fraser began. It did not matter to the gold seekers that the gold was on British territory. Douglas issued a proclamation claiming all the gold for Her Majesty's government.
Licenses for mining could be obtained at Victoria.
He vainly tried to control the influx of miners.

The gold seekers objected to paying a licence of 21 shillings a month to the Victoria government. Amor de Cosmos, who accompanied the miners from California and established The Colonist in Victoria, criticized Douglas' actions.
He said he was trying to preserve the grasping interests of the Hudson's Bay Company. He should have thrown open the country for settlement and free trade instead of trying to keep up a monopoly.

It was because of his dual position that Douglas made his only serious mistake in handling the gold rush. He remembered what had happened in Oregon when the country was thrown open for settlement by settlers whose sympathies were anti-British. He proclaimed that all boats found in the Fraser River or on the coast without having a licence from the Hudson's Bay Company should be liable to forfeiture. He placed an officer of customs at the mouth of the Fraser. Later the British government warned Douglas his commission extended to Vancouver Island only and he was infringing on the rights of British subjects elsewhere.

Gold seekers began to pour into Victoria. It became a city of tents overnight. Land values soared and a new city was created. Delays were tedious and transportation to the mines was hard to get. As soon as Douglas allowed the American ships to ply between the Island and the mines the transportation problem was solved.

A new colony of British Columbia was formed of the mainland in August, 1858. Douglas was made governor of both colonies on condition that he sever all connection with the Hudson's Bay Company whom he had served for 17 years.

Many disputes arose between the miners and the Indians. Douglas visited the mining camps and intervened in their disputes with the Indians.
His skill and tact in dealing with the natives prevented an Indian war as in Oregon. Later the miners took the law into their own hands and organized a posse to go against the Indians who had killed two miners. Douglas set out to investigate with a force of 35 men. He decided that liquor had caused the trouble. He forbade the sale of liquor to Indians. He received visits from the Indian chiefs and made them presents. He asked Britain for military protection for the gold country. One hundred and fifty soldiers were sent out under Col. Moody, who reached Victoria in November, 1858.

The mainland colony was administered from Vancouver Island. The governor and all officials were resident in Victoria.

As early as 1861 the dual governorship caused dissatisfaction in British Columbia. Narrow as was the authority of the assembly of Vancouver Island, it was at least a visible recognition of the people's inherent right to govern. Nothing of the sort existed on the mainland. The governor was the maker as well as the administrator of the laws. The people petitioned the British government for a representative assembly.

Douglas replied that he had spared no

VICTORIA IN 1866

exertion to serve the interests of both colonies.
He said that the British population of the mainland was too small to warrant an assembly.
He said he intended to proceed by degrees to the establishment of popular institutions. Through municipal councils he would train the people for the larger idea of a colonial assembly. As the only industry of the mainland was gold mining, the tax on supplies entering the country was the only means of revenue.

As mining on the lower Fraser declined, the Cariboo took on more importance. Quesnel Forks was the earliest locality to develop a permanent settlement. Other discoveries followed and reached their peak in a few years' time.
Barkerville and Williams Creek, discovered in 1871, had subsided by 1875.

When Douglas retired in 1863 the Colonial Office decided separate governors were necessary for the two colonies. An extension of one year's time was given to Douglas as governor of British Columbia. A representative assembly was set up — the manner of appointment of the members being left to the governor. On Jan. 21, 1864, the first assembly on the mainland opened. Provisions were made for the future joining of the two colonies. A knighthood was conferred on Douglas for his valuable services to the country.

The decline of mining on the Fraser led to loss of trade in Victoria. The mineral discoveries in the Kootenay that came later were not supplied from Victoria but from New Westminster.

The year 1865 was a year of progress for the mainland. The trail from the Fraser to the Kootenay amounting three ranges of mountains was opened up. A new route by way of the Kootenay Pass gave passage to the Hudson's Bay lands beyond the mountains. By 1865 New Westminster was connected by telegraph with the United States, Eastern Canada and the Cariboo.
The new constitution of 1863 had been successfully placed in operation. Popular candidates were elected at public meetings called by magistrates.

The real opposition to union lay in the rivalry of Victoria and New Westminster for the honor of being capital. In 1866 a petition in favor of union was signed by 445 persons. In the end the British government decided the question Aug. 6, 1866.
The choice fell on Victoria as capital of the new union. Bitterness was felt on the mainland for some time.

With the setting in motion of the forces which resulted in the union, Sir James Douglas passed from the scene. The spirits of the old-time force, the Hudson's Bay Company, lived and breathed in Douglas. It died only with his passing. The change was for the better as the future was soon to show. This is a tribute to the wisdom with which the foundations had been laid.

His retirement was marked by all those forms and ceremonies usual for the passing of a great man of public affairs. At Victoria 200 leading citizens attended a public dinner in his honor. In New Westminster 75 attended a similar dinner. As Douglas passed through the streets of Victoria, the people crowded to grasp his hand while the guns of the fort fired their farewell salute.

Douglas' chief opponent was Amor de Cosmos, founder and editor of the Colonist. His tribute as to personal worth written on Oct. 13, 1863, is as follows: "We have never in our criticism of the public acts of the executive head of the government failed in our esteem for the sterling honesty of purpose which has guided those acts nor for the many and noble qualities and virtues which adorn the man."

Douglas was now free to carry out his dream of many years, a voyage to Europe. Leaving Esquimalt in May, he sailed by way of Panama for England and Scotland. He visited France, Switzerland, Germany, Netherlands, Spain and Italy. He had an attack of illness in Rome — the ailment of the heart was induced, perhaps, by the strenuous early life of the fur traders. His mind was never far from the land to which he had given most of his life.

He writes in his diary during his trip: "A cloudy sky, a short sprinkling of rain, the low springing grass, the damp earth and the brave little daisy in Italy are not unlike early March scenes in Victoria."

He returned to Victoria to live in retirement.
He spent his time in the management of his private fortune, in constant reading, and in the outdoor exercises that had been his passion during the busiest part of his career. He was a prolific letter writer and we can form a good picture in our minds of the humanity and greatness of the man from many of his letters to his daughter, Martha, in school in England, and to his many friends on the mainland and in England.

Letter to daughter Martha in England:

13 August, 1872.

"We watched you till out of sight and returned with sad hearts to our deserted home.

"Blessed by the Lord Jesus who has not left us comfortless. He is a shelter from the storm, and a sure refuge in distress. We feel our dear ones are in his keeping and we will not sorrow as those without hope.

"I have just made a conditional sale of Metehosin for $5,000. A poor price yet better than keeping it on hand. Mamma sends her love. Amy wrote you the other day.

"May the Almighty bless you, James Douglas."

Excerpt from letter to a friend:

"We are busy now with the apples. They are finer than usual and abundant. They make a fine show in the apple house and will, I think, keep much better than they did in the large boxes we used to have.

"I send this morning's Colonist.

J.D."

Letters to Martha:

Friday, August 16

"Calm—fine weather. My foot is much easier.
Mama is well but sad. Drove, with James to the Uplands. Have a fancy for some land there.
Shall I buy a hundred acres? What is your opinion? Better have the money in the bank, ay?"

October 2nd.

towards Cadboro Bay stopping for a few minutes at Mrs. Booker's (Mary Tod) to make an afternoon call. Their house is very comfortable and they are planting fruit trees, laying out walks, making lawns, flower borders, and otherwise getting the grounds in order. Mrs.

Fall beauty has an ache in it . . . from the first fallen gold leaf to winter's chill is such a short distance. The in-between days are precious. If ever Heaven bends close to earth it is now . . . mornings are tingly fresh and although the noonday sun has lost a little of its fervor, summer still flaunts her gay skirts in Victoria gardens. Evenings are peppermint cool and the quicksilver of moonlight is on the sea at our door.

Now there is an urgency to enjoy every day to its fullest—every sunny day is like a treasure. It would be nice if we could bottle the last remnants of summer sunshine, for our delight when the North wind doth blow.

We must make the most of every fine day—plan a few more outdoor meals before packing up the barbecue equipment. Today we are going to talk about food suitable for these last eating-out days.

Country-style spare ribs or backbones are hearty favorites for the outdoor grill. Their aroma wafts the message: "Come and get it." Popular for years on farm tables, these meaty morsels take naturally to barbecuing. Usually pork takes long, slow cooking but with meat tenderizer, it can be cooked to perfection on a grill in one to 1½ hours. Made into a marinade, this product tenderizes and puts deep-down flavor into the meat. Do try this "country cousin" barbecue on your "city slicker" grill.

COUNTRY STYLE SPANISH FOR LAST DAYS OUT

BARBECUED COUNTRY-STYLE RIBS . . . 4 lbs. country style ribs or backbones, 1 package instant meat marinade; 2-3 cup cider or apple juice, ¼ tsp. nutmeg, ¼ tsp. thyme. Thoroughly blend contents of package Instant Meat Marinade with the liquid, nutmeg and thyme in a shallow pan. Place the ribs in marinade. Pierce all surfaces of meat thoroughly and deeply with a fork to carry flavor deep-down and lock in natural juices. Marinate at least 15 minutes, turning several times. Remove ribs from marinade. Drain. Reserve remaining marinade for basting. Place ribs on grill set six inches above glowing coals (gray, shot with a ruddy glow). Barbecue total one to 1½ hours or until crispy well done. Turn frequently and baste with marinade during last 30 minutes of cooking.

Pork and beans go hand in hand, so serve a bubbling pot of baked beans. With your favorite cole slaw, hot cornbread squares with honey, sliced fresh fruit and cream to round out this hearty menu. You might like to serve plum sauce and hot mustard for dipping the ribs.

PLUM SAUCE FOR DIPPING . . . blend 1 cup plum jam with ¼ cup vinegar. Heat thoroughly and serve with hot, English type mustard on the side. Sometimes I mix the plum jam and the dry mustard—1 to 2 tsp. dry mustard to 1 cup jam. The quantity of mustard depends on how hot you like it.

Any meal indoors or out is enhanced by chilled slices of large ripe tomatoes. Drain them with a little oil and vinegar, salt and freshly ground pepper. Sprinkle generously with crushed sweet basil . . . ambrosia!

And speaking of tomatoes here is a cooked dish that is delicious. Brown lightly some butter in a heavy skillet, add some chopped onion and saute until just soft. Add peeled and quartered tomatoes, salt and seasoned pepper. Place lid on skillet and simmer for five minutes. Remove lid and cover top with cheese slices. Slide under broiler just until cheese is bubbly. Serve on toast points. With crispy bacon this makes a fine luncheon dish. Quantities will depend on how many you are cooking for.

"Let's have a corn roast" brings back memories of camp fire days of childhood. The boys got the firewood and built the fire and the girls husked and cooked the corn. There were no fancy barbecues in those far-off days. We cooked the corn in a big kettle over an open fire usually on a sandy beach.

Corn on the cob is delicious no matter how you prepare it or where you eat it, but it is really out of this world when cooked in the open and eaten with plenty of butter and salt. When you eat corn it's to heck with the calories, both the corn and the butter are loaded.

The most important thing about cooking corn is that it should travel swiftly from garden to pot.

DEAR HELOISE:

If you like real thin, crisp toast of the milk type, try taking a piece of bread and ironing it between two pieces of foil until it's brown and thin. The ironed bread can be buttered or eaten plain, and it's delicious when cold.

You're so right. It's great I used thinly-sliced sand-with bread and placed it between two pieces of thin foil, ironing it with a hot iron.

The toast was about one-eighth inch thick and very hard when cold.

One of the most important light and meteorological stations on the British Columbia coast is at Estevan Point on the west coast of Vancouver Island. The settlement that surrounds it has a normal population of about 15, depending on the marital status of the respective staff members: the lighthouse keeper, his two assistants, four meteorologists and a telegraph linesman.

Estevan Point Has Own Spot In Canadian History

By GEORGE NICHOLSON

author of

Vancouver Island's West Coast
1762-1962

But small as it is, Estevan Point has its name emblazoned in Canadian history. It was there that our native Indians first saw and made contact with a ship. That was in 1774, four years before Captain Cook landed at Nootka.

Then more than a century and a half later, Estevan Point again became famous. It was the only place in Canada to come under enemy shellfire during the Second World War, when a Japanese submarine shelled the lighthouse.

Estevan Point lighthouse was established in 1907. The light was badly needed, for previous to that time, especially in the days of sail, many ships had met with disaster, several with the loss of all hands, in the immediate vicinity of the dangerous headland on which it stands.

In June, 1774, Lieutenant Commander Juan Perez sailed in the corvette Santiago from Monterey, with instructions from the Viceroy of Mexico to "examine the coast as far north as 60 degrees North Latitude; to take possession of the lands for Spain and to plant bottles containing the evidence."

Two Franciscan priests, Rev. Father Juan Crespie and Tomas de la Peña, accompanied the expedition. Together they kept a diary, which, with a translation in English, was published by the Historical Society of Southern California in 1891.

But Perez was back in Monterey within three months. He sighted the snow-capped mountains, but bad weather kept him off shore and he never actually landed, though he nearly did so once. When his water supply was almost out he decided to make land and as he neared shore many canoes loaded with Indians came out to meet him.

It was obvious that this was the first ship they had ever seen. They appeared to be friendly, but kept a safe distance away. Several boats were lowered and as the Indians drew nearer contact was made in sign language and a little trading, mostly the exchange of trinkets for furs, subsequently took place. But it seemed impossible to make them understand that the ship required water. Meanwhile, the wind freshened out of the west and the ship began to drag her anchor. The boats were recalled and hoisted back on board, the Santiago hurriedly put to sea and that was the last they saw of the Indians.

The two priests had in the meantime made careful notes of the type of clothing the Indians wore — principally capes and short skirts made either of animal skins or cedar and grass matting, "rain hats" also made of grass matting, the design of their canoes and other observations. An exchange of notes with other explorers in years to come definitely established these people as Nootka Indians, of whom the Hesquiat, the name of the village which they inhabited, are a sub-band.

That Perez' contact with the Indians occurred in the vicinity of Estevan Point is further substantiated by an entry in his navigation officer, Don Esteban, made in the ship's log. This disclosed that the Santiago had anchored a mile off shore in latitude 49.30 degrees, which is the approximate position of Estevan Point.

Perez named the point after his second-lieutenant, Estevan Jose Martinez. Four years later, Captain Cook unaware of the voyage of the Santiago, named it Breakers Point. It is also shown thus on Vancouver's chart of 1798. But the Spanish name was restored by the British Admiralty chart in 1849.

A few weeks previous to making this contact with the Indians at Estevan Point, Perez made a similar contact at the northwest tip of the Queen Charlotte Islands, believed by him to be part of the mainland and which he named Cape Santa Margarita — now Langara Point and Island. Had he gone ashore at either place he would have been the first European to set foot on the shores of what is now British Columbia. Instead, that honor fell to Capt. Cook, who landed at Friendly Cove, Nootka, four years later (1778).

Rev. A. J. Brabant established the first mission on the west coast of Vancouver Island in 1874, when he built a church and the priest's house a Hesquiat Indian village, four miles from Estevan Point. He resided there for 30 years and his memoirs give an interesting account of what happened when the Indians sighted their first ships, and white men for the first time also. The Hesquiat's account of the strange happening was told to him by direct descendants of Indians who actually took part in it.

According to their story the Santiago anchored in front of Oum-mis, one of their villages which is about three miles west of Estevan Point and occupied only when certain kinds of sea foods are available. They first saw the ship when it was far out to sea and thought it was an immense bird. It was watched with eager eyes and when it came closer they saw that it was no bird.

Was it a big canoe coming back from the land of the dead with their bygone chiefs? No, it was a floating house, with big wings (sails) and people standing on top of the house.

So they went off in their canoes to investigate. Yes, there were people on board, but different from themselves in color and appearance, and they spoke a strange language. It was something they had never seen before. Their curiosity aroused and encouraged by friendly gestures, they paddled closer and soon were alongside the ship's boats. They traded a few furs and articles of clothing, for iron, knives, coins and other odd trinkets; but the wind sprang up, the boats hurried back and the ship sailed away. Puzzled as they were, they gave the white men aboard the name "manashine" (floating house).

The shelling of the lighthouse by a Japanese submarine occurred June 20, 1942. At that time Estevan Point was also an important radio station, but the installation, along with the staff, has since been moved to the Tofino Airport at Long Beach. The story of the shelling is best told by an eye-witness, E. T. Redford, then chief wireless operator at Estevan Point, and now living in retirement at 3496 Aloha, Victoria.

The submarine surfaced about two miles off shore and was plainly visible. The shelling commenced at approximately 9:40 p.m. and continued for about 40 minutes. The first few shells landed on the beach about 100 yards in front of the lighthouse. R. M. Laffy, who was the lighthouse keeper at the time, immediately climbed the tower and put out the light, which he had lit only a few minutes previously. The sub commander then apparently raised his sights, fortunately for us, a little too high, far from then on the shells went overhead.

Approximately 25 shells were fired and, except for a few buildings and the light tower hit by shell fragments, no damage was caused either to the lighthouse or radio station. With the exception of the men on shift, who tapped out word of the shelling to Pacific Command at Work Point Barracks, Victoria, all others gave a hand getting the women and children away from the settlement.

The submarine pulled out on the surface. Dusk was approaching, but still everyone could see the dark hull and hear her engines quite clearly. While naturally there was some nervousness, everyone, including the women and children, took the whole incident in their stride, then spent the following day hunting for shell fragments for souvenirs. Planes from the Ucluelet and Coal Harbor RCAF air bases were out at dawn, but by that time the sub was probably a hundred miles or more away.

They were no "baby" missiles. Of 5.9 calibre, they weighed 80 pounds. Those that went overhead landed in the vicinity of Hesquiat Indian village, four miles directly behind the station. They scared the natives, but did no damage.

Several months later, a Japanese submarine was sunk off the New Zealand coast. Its crew was rescued and the first thing they told their captors was that their's was the submarine that shelled a Canadian lighthouse.

Mostly veterans with overseas service during the First World War, the shelling was no novel experience for the station menfolk, several of whom wore the scars of battle. But for the women and children, the 40-minute bombardment was a terrifying experience. Their only consolation when it was all over: the fact that they now formed a "select" group, scarcely 30 all told, including the inhabitants of nearby Hesquiat Indian village, that can boast of having been exposed to enemy shellfire on Canadian soil since the year 1876.

Confirming Mr. Redford's account of the shelling, Mrs. E. Lally, the lightkeeper's widow, now residing at 621 Trutch Street, Victoria, and the oldest surviving member of this brave little band, adds a few anecdotes from her own personal experience.

"Canadian warships passed the lighthouse almost daily. I saw two early that morning, and at the sound of gunfire thought they had returned and were engaged in target practice. I was just putting the youngest of my children to bed when the first shell exploded on the beach in front of the lighthouse. 'That's poor shooting! Came pretty close to us!' I yelled to my husband as he came down from the tower after lighting the lamp.

"Get the hell out of here! It's a Jap sub and they are shelling the lighthouse!" Mike (the husband) shouted back, as more shells whistled overhead. The order was immediately obeyed as women and children fled to the safety, as they thought, of the bushland.

"The shelling lasted about half an hour, though to us it seemed much longer," she recalls. "But that wasn't our only scare; while huddled together behind a fallen tree, suddenly a strange 'ticking' sound, louder than our heart beats, and that was loud enough, was heard.

"Were the Japs also firing delayed-action shells? Had one landed nearby? One that might explode any moment and blow us to smithereens," she said were their thoughts at the time.

"The 'time bomb' turned out to be the ticking of an alarm clock that Patricia, my 12-year-old daughter, had brought along with her. Why, she never could explain.

"Called back to the station, it was still light enough to see the submarine as it sailed away. We could also hear the hum of its diesel engines.

JAMES O'MARA DOESN'T WANT TO SELL HIS PAINTINGS

By PATRICK O'NEILL

Artist James O'Mara is a young man who quit his nine-to-five job, set up a studio, opened a commercial art gallery, and went to work.

With his own art gallery to sell his own paintings, what more could an artist want?

But O'Mara has a problem. He doesn't want to sell any of his paintings.

"When I hear one of them has been sold, sometimes I feel very depressed. They are all so personal, they should belong to me."

But that approach is hardly economical, O'Mara knows it, and his paintings have been one of the fastest-selling commodities for the price, in Victoria this summer.

"The only time I've been happy selling a painting is when I was really hard up for money."

If he inherited a fortune tomorrow, O'Mara would forget the shows, displays, and sales.

He would paint for himself, and keep his work at home, unseen by the public.

"It is very difficult for an artist to sell the work of other artists in a gallery, because he knows artists feel much the same way."

O'Mara doesn't have any trouble at all finding buyers. More often they find him.

"I've never had a show," he said. "For several years I have been trying to get enough work done to have a show."

"But as soon as I get a bit of a stock, its sold, and I have to keep going and going."

Now that he is setting up his own studio at the back of his new gallery on Wharf Street, O'Mara intends to build up a stock for a show, if he has to lock his paintings up to keep them.

With a flare for names, he has come up with two of the most colorful titles for galleries in Victoria, his new Angel's Camp, and Pandora's Box, now a competitor.

O'Mara is a man apart among Victoria artists: he has little formal training, didn't have time for the normal channels of the art world, and is determined to go his own way.

Though he is just two years over legal drinking age, his work commands public respect and increasing prices, whether he approves or not.

He is outspoken about art. For example: Against representational pictures — "If you are just going to do a flat black painting, you might as well take a camera."

The trouble with Vancouver Art School — "they try to cram a lot of stuff into you, you can't develop anything on your own."

Why he doesn't like selling his work — "it's like being pinned up on the wall in your underwear."

On the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria — "It is too conservative. Young artists have nowhere to go for inspiration."

O'Mara was born in Toronto. His father was a pilot in the air force. In his early years he saw many of the world's art treasures in European museums, as the family went from posting to posting.

"I was taking field trips with my uncle at the age of two and a half years," he said.

His uncle is a commercial artist in Toronto.

"I completely lost interest in art at the age of 12."

But in Grade 12 he suddenly decided art was his life. He credits a teacher for the transformation: John Dobbertener.

Young Artist with Ideas

O'MARA with Anyone Lived in a Pretty How Town.

"He gave me the big push," said O'Mara.

In that final year of high school he won the Hallmark Scholarship.

The scholarship entitled him to enter any art school he wished. He chose Vancouver School of Art, and almost stuck it out for a full term.

"I can learn more by trial and error," he said. "I wasn't getting that much out of the school."

He cheerfully admits "that was the only formal art training I've had."

At the moment, O'Mara is probably the hottest-selling artist in Victoria, and his oils command good prices.

"But I've never had training in oils," he said, "not a single lesson."

Another of his favorite mediums is the monoprint, which he developed by "fooling around," not by formal learning.

He has used grass, ink, rollers, and other odd ingredients for his black and white monoprints.

In the classic clash between representational and abstract, O'Mara comes down squarely on the side of the abstract.

"Problems in painting can become much more interested exerted in abstract fashion... rhythms, shapes, patterns and over-all composition problems, for example."

He leaned back and thought.

"All art made by the hand of man is abstract. As soon as a man draws a tree, he puts something of himself in it, so it is abstracted from its original form."

For example in O'Mara's much-admired and recently sold large oil work, Anyone Lived in a Pretty How Town, the impressions are blended into an abstract look at Victoria.

O'Mara explained Rembrandt interests him as much as the modern French-Canadian painter Riopelle.

"Things that I value are memories, experiences, associations. I can recognize the symbolic nature of these things."

O'Mara said abstract art has a meaning of color and form, and expresses feelings, thoughts, moods, not unlike a realistic painting.

But he said the abstract work is more personal, because it can translate the painter's feelings about his subject.

O'Mara said a good painting, to him, is one in which you can search for a year, and find something new every day.

"A painting should change during the day. The changing light should give shadow and texture to the work."

O'Mara's parents live in Hollywood, where his father is a salesman. He and wife Jan live in an apartment rented to them by Dobbertener, his old teacher, now in the design department of Uvic.

"If showing and selling work didn't make or break the artist, I wouldn't even show," said O'Mara.

He said the feeling of personal stake in each work is probably more common to poets than to painters.

"I'm keeping a record of my paintings, of where they go," he said. "I have colored slides so I can keep in touch, and maybe borrow them back sometime for a show."

A personal disappointment came recently when he donated a painting to a cause, and later the momentary charity refused to tell him who bought the painting.

O'Mara believes the main disadvantage to working in Victoria is the lack of places to give the artist inspiration.

"One reason I'm glad about Angel's Camp is that now I can walk out of my studio (in the rear of the building) look around the walls, and get inspiration."

Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, he believes, "should have more pop shows, more up-to-date things from New York. The gallery is too conservative, compared to Vancouver's gallery."

"There is a lack of enthusiasm."

Another thing that bothers O'Mara is the lack of co-operation between artists.

"I would like to see all craftsmen getting together without having an organizer, a thing that just happens without planning."

The golden years of co-operation were 1910 to 1920 in Paris, when artists like Picasso and his fellows worked together.

"They really stuck together. If one artist got food, he'd give it to someone who had nothing. They created something, and gradually they began to make it together."

O'Mara said "there was something great about that period. Those guys were relying on each other, artists, musicians, writers and poets."

He said craftsmen tend to be too secretive about their work and techniques.

"I think they should get together and share."

Soon he and three other artists are planning a four-man show in Vancouver.

He will probably borrow back some of the paintings he has sold for the show; and it will probably lead to more popularity, so he will sell more paintings.

But then, he doesn't really want to sell them anyway.

Pet Sparrowhawk

MICHAEL BRUCE

No one 'pets' a sparrowhawk at first, though after they become tame they are gentle and affectionate.

We had one for a pet for 17 years, and learned a lot about the intimate side of his life.

It was a snowy evening in late October that I found him in a bush in southwest Alberta. He was a young bird that had missed the migration and was obviously dying from hunger. But his courage was not diminished in the least and my hands were painfully pecked and clawed before I had him wrapped in my winter cap and carried him home.

I put him in an old rabbit hutch in the kitchen and gave him some raw meat. He tore the meat from my fingers and attached my hand. For the next few days his meals were passed to him on the end of a stick. He would eat the meat and drink water, but it was a week before he accepted food without attacking what it was on. Apparently he thought that a moving object as large as himself was dangerous.

It snowed for several days after we found him, and as it would have meant his certain death to have released him then, we kept him through the winter. By spring he was so tame that we did not think he could adjust to a wild life, so we kept him permanently. He was named Bullet — a fast flying, hard nosed thing that has no fear.

We extended a part of the back porch, and put chicken mesh wire on the sides. Assorted perches were installed. Then we moved his hutch-cage into it and opened the door. Bullet hopped out, looked around and tried his wings. There was room to fly, his new home being about five feet square and seven feet high. He flattered around most of the day, but at night returned to his hutch bedroom. We set mouse traps, caught insects, killed the occasional town sparrow and gave him pieces of raw meat to eat. He dealt with each in a different way.

No matter how we headed him dead mice, he quickly turned them head upwards, and grasped them around the shoulders with one foot. One could hear the bone crack from a hard peck behind the ear. Apparently instinct told him that dead mice don't struggle, and if dropped, don't run.

We tried pulling a dead mouse across the floor on a string. Bullet dived and grabbed. We pulled harder, towing him.

"Krrrr, krrrr," cried Bullet, and hung on, flapping his wings and trying to hop backwards on one foot. No reasonable amount of pulling would make him let go.

He treated birds much like mice (a quick, hard head peck) though he plucked the birds as he ate, whereas he ate the entire mouse.

He accepted and ate raw meat, though never with any enthusiasm. Possibly he could find no place to "kill" it, but ate it because it was chow. He would never eat cooked meat.

The only insects he would eat were grasshoppers. Worms, beetles, caterpillars (particularly hairy ones) even crickets, were untouchables. (In their wild state, of course, these birds eat many insects that we could not catch.) With small grasshoppers, he would crush their heads and then swallow them whole in one or two pecks. With large ones, he would crush and eat the head, then pull out the insides, throw them away and eat all the rest, except the "stick" portion of the hind legs.

He was always ready to take more food. His appetite seemed amazing. Then one day I saw him scratching in the corner of his porch home. An examination disclosed caches of food in each corner and some other places. Like the shrike, sparrowhawks put a bit away for a rainy day. He was really disgusted when his floor was thoroughly cleaned and his pantry emptied of odorous items. He sulked the rest of the day.

Seeing that he liked to have plenty of food, we once gave him three mice at the same time. He held one in his beak, one in one foot and nearly fell over trying to hold the third. He soon gave up and refused to have anything more to do with it.

He became quite tame and friendly to everyone in the house. A family finger pushed into his cage would receive a friendly nibble, but a stranger's finger usually got a painful peck. We made a little secluded bedroom with leaves and grass in it, in a corner of his cage and he spent each night there. A tap on his door was always answered by "Trrrrt."

One day there was a wild "Krr-krr-krr" from his porch cage. We rushed to see why he was excited. He was sitting on a perch, half raised wings quivering, and holding a dying, squirming mouse in one foot. Apparently the homeless mouse had been preying on our back porch and gone into Bullet's section.

As often as possible, we let him out in our spare room for a real fly, though there was room to fly in his porch home. He would often perch on my shoulder or head. After his second claw foot landed on my head, I always wore a hat when in the room with him.

His favorite plaything at such times was an empty cotton spool, which he would peck and chase all over the floor. Another object that always interested him and seemed to puzzle him was an ordinary child's humming top. Certainly he had no previous experience or instinct to guide him. He would watch it spin, try an experimental peck or two, and as it reeled to a stop, often launch a mild attack. He seemed to sense that though it moved by itself, it was not alive.

Sometimes we concealed a dead mouse in the room, with a string tied to it. When Bullet was in the air, someone would pull the mouse across the floor. Bullet would promptly go in chase, and no matter how the mouse moved, he seldom missed his strike. Once he caught it, he never let go. We could gently lift him and the mouse off the floor; he'd flap and "krrr" but hang on.

He was very clean in his person, like most wild things. He liked a dust bath once or twice a month, and a water bath at least once a week. We would give him a shallow pan with a couple of inches of cool water. He would splash and turn for several minutes, finally hopping out with even the top of his head soaked, barely able to fly. Then he'd get on a perch and flap and shiver to dryness.

Romance came in the last year of his life on Vancouver Island. He had a back porch as before and somehow he attracted a female sparrowhawk. She would cling to the outside of the wire and accept all the food he would give her, which was all he was given. She was obviously a gold-digger, but he was happy. We could have caught her, but would never imprison a wild bird.

We cannot know if he really missed her when she left with the autumn migration, but one day in November he refused to eat and sat quietly in a corner of his cage. He would not eat meat day after day, but continued to sit quietly, feathers fluffed out, and seemed to doze.

Next morning, a little more than 17 years after we rescued him, he was lying dead on the floor.

which has now become so widespread, a local group met in 1957 and formed the society.

George West was first president and continues to be an active member, and for many winters past has been the instructor for Victoria night school course on stone polishing. Geology for Rockhounds is another popular course, given by Bill Erichsen, also a charter member and still an active one.

Becoming president in the fall of 1963, Bill Dibb's first announcement was that the society would hold a big rock and hobby show the next year, and through his energetic leadership that first show became a notable success. This was repeated last year in the second annual show, and the members are quick to point out the assistance given by other hobby groups who join in to make the large Curling Rink a very worthwhile place to visit on these occasions at a cost of 50 cents admission fee. The extensive exhibits are augmented by workshop sections where craftsmen demonstrate their hobbies. There is something of interest for all who have a hobby or would like to have one.

The preparations for the current show have moved smoothly ahead under this year's president Bob Copeman, and everyone concerned is looking forward to a great success.

Priests, Nuns, Indians Come Alive In Sisters of Saint Ann Story

Reviewed by E. D. WARD-HARRIS

Two notable events occurred in Victoria in 1858: the arrival from Quebec of four pioneer Sisters of Saint Ann, and the founding of the British Colonist, later to become The Daily Colonist.

Two years earlier, Bishop Modeste Demers, Vancouver Island's first Roman Catholic prelate, acquired a 100-year-old press to print a French-language paper, Le Courier. The venture failed.

The old hand press was then used to print the Vancouver Island Gazette, which, in turn, folded after eight issues. Then Amor de Cosmos acquired the press to print his British Colonist until he imported the colony's first Hoe power press in 1862.

The ancient press subsequently went by pack train up the old Cariboo Trail to Barkerville to produce the Cariboo Sentinel, and later the Inland Sentinel, at Emory.

Found abandoned in 1904 in a Kamloops basement, the press was presented in 1912 to the Sisters of Saint Ann in Victoria and from that time has had an honored place in the convent's cluttered museum.

This, one of hundreds of items of interest, is recorded in an interesting new book, A Century of Service.

The link between the Sisters and the Colonist was cemented through the years with the latter faithfully recording the former's activities from the beginning to the present day.

A Century of Service is, of course, the history in this part of the world of the Sisters of Saint Ann, but inevitably it overflows into a social history of the province.

I say "inevitably" because wherever there were people—colonists or natives—the nuns appeared to minister in their fashion, to their spiritual and educational needs of the "pagan" and other children. Why Indians, Chinese and the rest are termed "pagan" because their beliefs differ is a puzzlement.

In this way, from the humble beginning in a little log cabin in the bush on what is now Humboldt

A CENTURY OF SERVICE,
by Sister Mary Margaret Down; published by the Sisters of Saint Ann.

Street, the Order expanded its activities to cover the southern part of Vancouver Island, the lower mainland, the Interior, and finally the Yukon, Alaska and, briefly, Japan.

Nothing perturbed these incredibly brave women. Wherever a need arose, they went and nothing, but nothing daunted them.

A Century of Service is the work of Victoria-born and educated (at Saint Ann's Academy) Sister Mary Margaret Down, Ph.D., now a member of the faculty of Notre Dame University in Nelson.

I use the word "work" but labor of love would be more appropriate. Pride in her Order, its founders and its colossal accomplishments, shines from every page.

This could so easily have become merely a dull recital of facts and figures, eminently worthy—and eminently indigestible. Instead, after a slow and rather dull pedantic beginning, the author has managed to clothe her story with flesh and blood. Priests, nuns, Indians, rulers and pupils of those early days are made to come alive again.

Governor James Douglas is shown here not so much as a government functionary and social lion as a parent (his two daughters were among the first pupils enrolled at the Sisters' school) and as a very human being.

In these pages, too, we meet all the familiar old names, Helmcken, McQuade, Yates, Irving, and the rest. We also meet the Indians and read with fascination of their introduction to western learning.

All through the Century of Service, despite the restrained writing style or, perhaps, because of it, we share the frustrations, hardships and triumphs of these remarkable religious pioneers. Their conviction that their task was essential, nay, ordained, would seem to have supplied the impetus to surmount difficulties that would have floored less dedicated souls.

The author mentions, almost en passant, the founding of St. Joseph's Hospital. That story has yet to be written. A Century of Service deals essentially with the contribution by the Sisters of Saint Ann to education. For this reason, the Oblate Fathers and the founding of St. Louis College on Pandora, are only briefly touched on.

What saves the book from being an insular chronicle is the frequent interruption of the narrative to insert delightful, and sometimes disturbing glimpses of the social history of those early times.

● In 1869 a small stone church was built in the Cowichan district and Joe Tzalpaymout, strong man of the Quamiehan band, broke the rock for the walls with one of the cannon balls by means of which Governor Douglas had razed his village a few years earlier.

● In 1859, as a result of the gold rush, a considerable Negro population settled in Victoria. Pressures by white settlers forced segregation of white and Negro children in the Sisters' school.

● In 1862 Vancouver Island land was made available to all British subjects and aliens who had sworn allegiance. Entitlement was 100 acres for a single man, 200 acres if he was married and 10 acres more for every child under 18. Price: four shillings and twopence an acre, payable over three years.

● Two priests, Brother Philip Sorel and Rev. Charles Pandosy, were the first to promote the fruit industry in the Okanagan Valley, in 1859-60.

● Miners in the gold rush period imported camels in 1861 to tote loads up the Cariboo Trail. The last camel died a Cache Creek in 1905.

These engaging sidelights help the story along and provide colorful background for the almost unbelievable exploits of these early-day nuns in the face of great odds, like the following hair-raising incident.

When miners flocked to Williams Lake after the first gold strike there, the nuns followed in due course to open a school for the young, mostly half-breeds. Getting there was a nightmare, with the stagecoach negotiating the crude "road" which at times clung precariously to the sides of precipices.

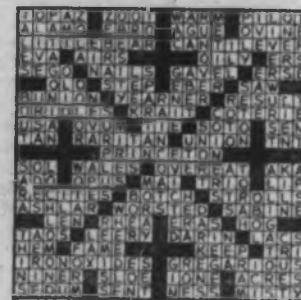

On one of these ghastly stretches the nuns' stagecoach came face to face with a massive "train" drawn by oxen. Impasse. With one of the nuns holding the reins, the men unloaded the coach, removed its wheels, unhitched the horses and carried the coach bodily over the heads of the oxen train. There it was reassembled, loaded and the hazardous journey proceeded.

A Century of Service is a valuable addition to Canadiana. To British Columbians, and Vancouver Islanders in particular, whether historically-minded or not, this book will prove interesting. That every former pupil of Saint Ann's Academy will devour it avidly goes without saying.

Sister Mary Margaret Down has performed an excellent job of research. The extensive bibliography is testimony to her thoroughness. Incidentally, to students of Canadian history the bibliography is worth the price of the book.

A Century of Service, printed in Victoria, is published by the Sisters of Saint Ann themselves (835 Humboldt Street—the original site) and a very fine production it is.

PHYLACTOLOGY . . . or Spy-Catching

Reviewed by W. G. ROGERS

Phylactology—how many novels have been written about it, how many movies confectioned out of it, how many times have you grown breathless and bug-eyed at a plot on this subject! You never realized it? It takes Capt. Hunter to explain the word, which is Kingsley Amis' own: You can find the Greek roots even in a desk dictionary but you're in the dark, as are Hunter's friends, until he defines it: Spy-catching.

The chief phylactologist, or—ger, in this novel combining the slightly mad and the reassuringly common-sensical, is in the dark about the man he's chasing; but according to modern techniques, he aims the spotlight frankly at himself. I am the spy-chaser, he goes around saying—and also asking: aren't you the spy?

The time seems to be the Korean war, but any recent anxious year would do. The place is a hush-hush camp in England where Operation

Apollo is being laid on, as I suppose the English would express it. It appears to be a hazardous affair with predictable casualties among the brave operatives, yet while everyone is expected to show a do-or-die spirit for dear old England, someone ingloriously, even traitorously, sets out to found an Anti-Death League. Is he associated with the problematical spy in their midst? Spy-catcher Capt. Leonard is doubly in the dark.

Amis, an honest mystifier, lays most of his cards on the table at the very start. We have only a few pages to turn to meet Hunter, Leonard, Churchill, Naidu, Fawkes, Dr. Best, Ayscough, Lady Lucy and Catharine. Major Ayacus, the chaplain, is not the first doubting clergyman to whom Amis has introduced us, nor is Lucy the first nymphomaniac, but they are more responsible personages within this fictional framework than they were in their original incarnations. Catharine has just been freed from an asylum and she still teeters on an emotional brink as she enters into a passionate and curative love affair with Churchill. Dr. Best insists on diagnosing her as a latent lesbian, and just as mistakenly labels Hunter a repressed homosexual. Hunter has nothing in the least repressed about him, and there are effective, instructive and by no means superficial scenes to demonstrate it.

From first to last this is the work of a technically accomplished novelist. Amis so arranges his story that people and plot equally pique your interest; you no sooner approach a sufficiency of one than he switches nimbly to the other. All the effects are slightly exaggerated. Lucy is nymphomaniac plus, Best is more than ordinarily in error, Leonard is professionally too businesslike, and so on, yet all is exaggerated to the same degree. A certain matter-of-factness serves as a constant reminder that if this is life, it is also an astutely disciplined art.

In effect this is a spy story within a spy story—and some very lively action is followed by sharp right and left turns leading headlong to an unforeseen climax, so that it makes good reading on several levels. Amis finds us slightly absurd: faulty psychiatry, phoney militarism, a worrisome religiosity, half-hearted in our betrayals. This is our public aspect. Perhaps we are at our best, or securely escape our worst, only in our truly private, intimate moments. — Saturday Review.

SOCKEYE SAGA

skin suit and boots and jumped into the cockpit to haul in the net. But which was my net?

I hauled on the line leading from my lantern buoy and soon was busy hauling in over the stern roller my net. After taking in a few fathoms I came up against a very new and well found fishboat with a Scandinavian owner who was angrily telling me I had drifted over top of his net so our nets were crossed. Luckily he had most of his net on board so it should have been easy to untangle the rest.

But when my partner in trouble waved his arm to the west and shouted more angry words, I looked, and to my horror saw looming up a huge black rock or island surrounded by breakers. My Scandinavian friend by this time had started his engine, hoping to tow the rest of his net clear of the rock.

Sadly enough a large part of his net was around the stern of his boat. He commenced to tow and I hoped all was well, but now his web was drawn into the churning propeller. Then the "clunk-clunk" of corkis as the prop banged them against his hull.

It was all over for him. I thought it was time I tried to tow around the rock. But no sooner had I engaged the clutch than I heard the dreaded sound of corkis round the prop. The engine stopped dead.

I looked and the rock was very close. The outgoing tide and wind was driving all boats to the rocks and open sea. I loomed one of my long oars to my partner in distress to fend himself off the rocks, but I am sure he never used it, for as we hit the rock together only a few yards apart, carried up on the crest of a wave, he made a mighty leap and managed to hang on and scramble up the slippery rock.

He reached the top and called for help, but in that howling gale he was indeed a voice crying in the wilderness.

All boats around were in similar trouble.

Then I began a long ordeal to save myself and boat. With my remaining oar I pushed against that black rock for hours. As each succeeding wave lifted my boat and heaved it against the rock I would push with all my strength as the wave receded, thus preventing the boat from grounding on the sloping rock and capsizing.

I closed the hatch and door to the cabin and prepared for a long battle.

So it proved to be. The waves grew larger yet, possibly at the turn of the tide. My companion's boat was taking a fearful pounding on the rock. But he stayed on top of the rock still shouting against the wind for help.

Things got worse, the waves larger. Finally one huge one took my boat high on the rock. I could not hold on and found myself under the water between the barnacle-covered rock and my boat.

It was mighty dark down there and I feared as the wave receded the boat would crush me on the rock. So with my right hand I pushed on the rock—with the left on the boat. The barnacles tore the flesh on my right forearm but I was too busy to notice it.

The next I was aware of (and to this day I believe in miracles) I found myself clutching the handrail on the boat's cabin. I made my way to the deck where all was chaos. The hatch covers were gone, the water can, spare gas cans, the balance of the net, my daytime catch, some 40 silvery green sockeye were gone, and the hull was half full of water. The cabin had not suffered much, the hatch cover being closed.

The first streaks of dawn were in the sky and the waves grew smaller. Now with the tide half out I could see my net festooned around the rock; but still I could not free myself from its deadly embrace, my knife having been lost in the big wave.

A boat appeared heading upstream, evidently having been carried by the gale past the rock during the night. He saw my trouble and came close enough to send his young boy over in a rowboat with a line. But the rowboat was leaky and half full of water.

The boy struggled manfully to make it to me, but his boat was too water-laden and he made no progress. I saw he was in more danger than I and waved him to go back.

Soon after a boat obviously handled by a seaman ran in and made fast to the Scandinavian's boat and towed it away. The owner on top of the rocks I never saw again.

He may still be up there waving and shouting like the prophet of old.

At last with daylight one of my friends from my home port came up past the rock. With a glance he swung alongside, tossed me a towline which I made fast to the bowpost. He did not slow down but kept right on going, tearing away the web which had held me fast to the rock all night long.

In ten minutes we were anchored in a little cove having breakfast. My cabin was dry and I soon exchanged my wet clothes for dry ones. Then I was towed back for the net which we salvaged in part. Then up to the machine shop where I was fitted with new rudder, net guard, and had the propeller repaired.

I was indeed lucky to be alive, more so than many others who in previous years had lost their lives on that fearful rock. Some higher power took care of me that night. I still think traps are best!

being occupied in her spare time in bitter weather repairing a battered sled bought cheaply.

With the breakup of the ice she loaded this flimsy defiance to the great Yukon River with provisions, blanket roll and, atop the pile—the stuffed hide of the black and white dog! Dawsonites watched the frail craft with its cery, wreath-like wisp of a woman steering in the stern, her ghastly banner of devotion always before her eyes.

So blizzard a sight could not fail to be remembered when her boat passed through Tanana, nor its arrival at Nome. This long voyage, in as crazy a water vehicle as ever floated upon Arctic waters, was, for all that, probably to Lillian the least physically demanding.

Leaving the boat upon the beach, she filled her knapsack with provisions; across its top her thin blanket roll, and, as banner over all, the lightly grass-stuffed hide of the black and white dog.

Into the Arctic vastness she disappeared. Months went by before an Eskimo reported meeting the astonishing vision of a woman beyond Teller. Somehow, somewhere she had fashioned a small two-wheeled cart. This she was slowly tugging along, with atop its load the form of a black and white dog, a sight which terrified the superstitious native.

Did Lillian, by Eskimo or other boat, cross Bering Strait to at long last, reach her Russian destination? And, why, of all places Siberia? Or does, somewhere on this side of that bleak water, lie her remains, the bones of an incomprehensible woman, driven by a demonic homing urging to accomplish a saga unique in northern annals?

SANDWICK CORNER

By DORIS FARMER TONKIN

I once heard a woman—daughter of a pioneer—say that Sandwich Corner was the most romantic spot in the Comox Valley. She has a point, and thanks to the late Capt. G. R. Bates, OBE, part of this romance is preserved for posterity.

In 1956 he and his wife erected a cairn to commemorate the spot on which the first four settlers landed. For this we must be thankful, for other landmarks in this area are fast disappearing. The Vicarage which rose on the site of the original St. Andrew's Mission a few hundred yards away, was demolished some years ago. Now the old store and original Sandwich post office, dating from the 1880s, is about to make way for road improvement at the very corner in question.

The inscription on the cairn reads:

IN COMMEMORATION
THIS CAIRN MARKS THE PLACE
WHERE IN AUGUST, 1862, THE FIRST SETTLERS LANDED IN THE COMOX
VALLEY. THEY REACHED THIS DESTINATION
BY INDIAN CANOE UP THE TSOLUM RIVER. IN MEMORY OF THIS HISTORICAL EVENT LOUISA S. BATES, DAUGHTER OF REGINALD TERRY CARWITHEM,
ONE OF THESE FIRST SETTLERS, DEDICATES THIS CAIRN. 1956.

The names of these gentlemen are not given but to the best of my belief they were: Reginald Terry Carwithen, Reginald Pidcock, Harry Blaksley, and John Bailey. The exact date of the landing is not known, nor is that of the influx of settlers — about 60 — which followed hard on their heels.

I like to picture that landing. Indeed, we had a re-enactment of it when celebrating our centenary in 1962 which was quite colorful. Four descendants of pioneers, Chris Carwithen, Oswald Harmston, George Bates and Linton Machin were peddled up the river by Indians in a canoe which was a reasonable facsimile of those in use when the white men came. But the river must have gouged a much deeper channel through the years, for it is now a steep climb up the bank.

Those four men were young, and I'm sure they were gay and dashing. Though they had a dash at the Cariboo fields, I think the lure of gold was the excuse, not the reason, for their coming to the coast of Northwest America. The real call was the spirit of adventure. Neither did they expect to become the founding fathers of a new outpost of Empire, but they did have the good sense to pre-empt land.

All four left their mark upon the valley though Mr. Carwithen was the only one to stay here the rest of his life after returning to England, and meeting and marrying most romantically a lovely Newfoundland girl on his way back to Canada. Numerous descendants even unto the fourth generation reside here.

Mr. Pidcock also left descendants, though he himself became Indian agent at Fort Rupert some years later.

He built the first sawmill in the district, and his son, George, who grew up to be Courtenay's well-known magistrate for many years, had the distinction of being the first white child born west of the Courtenay River. The Pidcock name has always been closely associated with the progress of the valley.

Blaksley and Bailey both returned to England to live, but Mr. Bailey reportedly left his heart in the valley for he always cherished a desire to return and would not sell his property here during the lifetime. He married after he went back and his children were brought up on stirring stories of his life as a pioneer. The house he built stood stout and strong and was occupied until within the last two years. The owners decided to build themselves a new bungalow as the old house had become almost petrified and so nail-resistant that they could not modernize it with any degree of success.

Mr. Blaksley continued to correspond with his cousin, Mr. Carwithen, after he went home to England, and such letters as have been preserved by the family give interesting sidelights on early days.

The Corner was originally called Mission Corner but became Sandwich after Eric Dunoon named and operated the first post office—first other than the one at Comox Wharf which served the very early settlers. The Sandwich post office was superseded by a rural route from Courtenay in the late 1940s.

Besides the re-enactment of the landing in 1962, the cairn has added other colorful moments to Valley life. There was the cornerstone laying ceremony in May 1956 which attracted a number of people, mostly descendants of the pioneers. Chief Andy Frank of the Comox Indian Band, with his wife, was present in full regalia. They were also at the re-enactment. The daughters of two original settlers, Mrs. R. R. McQuillan, nee Jennie Carwithen, and Mrs. F. Childs, nee Jane Finley, each laid a stone. Tea was afterwards served in the nearby garden of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Marriott. Mrs. Marriott is also the daughter of a pioneer.

But the most colorful and interesting ceremony of all took place on July 26, just past, when the cairn was unveiled by his Honor, Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes.

Just why the unveiling was so long delayed is not clear. Perhaps the stone-laying ceremony precluded another one that year. Capt. Bates died in 1959 which may account for the fact that the cairn was not unveiled in 1962, which would have been a logical occasion. But it seems that Capt. Bates had cherished the hope that the cairn would someday be properly unveiled and General Pearkes whom he had known personally during the Second World War was his preferred choice.

So it came about that in the presence of representatives from Campbell River, Comox, Cumberland, and Courtenay, and local MIA Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell the lieutenant-governor removed the Canadian flag from over the cairn and delivered an apt little speech. He was introduced by Dr. Bruce Gordon, president of the local Historical Society, and several other members of it were present. Mrs. Bates was there, of course, and Mrs. Childs who laid one of the cornerstones. Mrs. McQuillan has since passed on. Many other descendants of pioneers watched the ceremony which left us all a little bit more conscious of the proud history of our valley and grateful to the memory of those early settlers who landed so gallantly back in 1862.
